

Problems Cause Nebraska's 1974 Greenbelt Law To Be Unused

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Not a single acre of Nebraska farmland has received a tax break under the 1974 greenbelt law, an inquiry by The Star has revealed.

A technical flaw in the law and practical dollars-and-cents considerations have prevented farmers from taking advantage of the law, interviews with state and county tax officials indicated.

The sponsor of the law, Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, said he hasn't pinpointed the solution as yet but will seek a means to make it work, even if a change in the law is needed.

The law is intended to save family farms on the fringes of urban areas from being forced out of production and subdivided by developers.

As urban areas grow toward farmlands, property taxes on the farms customarily rise due to the potential for development. The higher taxes are blamed for forcing these farms out of production and into the hands of developers.

The greenbelt law permits land used and zoned for agriculture to be taxed according to its agricultural value and not its development potential. As a result, the owner of such a farm will pay less property tax.

The trick is to benefit farmers without creating a windfall for real estate developers, as critics charged the law would.

And trying to tread that narrow line is apparently how problems arose.

Joe Vick, chief of the State Revenue Department's property tax division, said the greenbelt law has not been used because it applies to land specifically zoned for agricultural use only.

The problem therein lies that there is no land specifically zoned for agricultural use only. Normally, agricultural land is zoned so that it can also be used for other purposes, such as cemeteries and light industry.

Consequently, Vick said, "Nobody qualifies." An attorney general's opinion issued last year confirms this.

Lancaster County Assessor Fritz Meyer said he received three applications from farmers to take advantage of the greenbelt law but had to deny the applications because the land was not zoned for agricultural use only.

In addition, Meyer said the greenbelt law was "not very good" for the farmer.

"The benefits were minimal," Meyer said. "To come out ahead on it, a farmer would have to keep his land for 15-20 years."

"The benefits were minimal," Meyer said. "To come out ahead on it, a farmer would have to keep his land for 15-20 years."

The reason for this is that the law contains a "rollback clause" providing that when the use of the land changes the owner pays the difference between the taxes under the new use and the agricultural use for the previous five years, plus interest.

"That can amount to quite a lot," Meyer said.

Don Nelson, state planning and programming director, said many landowners would not want the agriculture only zoning, since it could reduce the land's sale value.

If a buyer wanted to use land zoned for agriculture only for another purpose, he would have to seek a zoning change, Nelson said.

Warner was aware of the problem with the greenbelt law prior to the 1975 session but he said he did not seek corrective action immediately since he did not want it too open-ended.

"I haven't rushed it for the reason I wanted to devise it so no abuse or misuse would occur," Warner said. "If the law is too loose, it will be much more difficult to correct."

He noted that Kansas is considering a constitutional amendment to value agricultural lands according to use.

Until some change is made, either legislatively or otherwise, the greenbelt law is likely to remain unused.

Education Board Meets... Student Policy Changes OKd

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday night approved revised procedures for excluding, suspending and expelling students.

Although there were no major changes, the new policy conforms more closely to recent Supreme Court decisions that require due process for students under the law.

Students may be excluded from school in emergency circumstances, such as having a communicable disease that threatens others health, or if their conduct is disruptive or presents a threat to others' physical safety.

Short- and long-term suspension and expulsion procedures require that the school district show grounds for the action and dispose of cases within 10 days of a complaint. If school officials exceed the 10-day limit, a student may return to classes.

Will Be Tough

That's "one of the parts that is very much a concern to me," said board attorney Edwin C. Perry. "It's going to be tough" to conduct a hearing and process required paperwork in that time, especially for children with serious problems that may require help from outside agencies.

Supt. John Prash agreed. "We have the potential for a large number" of students who "want to exhaust all procedures available to them," which could result in an administrative headache.

But he supported the changes, approved 5-0 by the board, with

13-Year-Old Girl Rescues Tike In Pool

A 13-year-old girl dove into 8 1/2 feet of water in a backyard swimming pool Tuesday afternoon to save a 3-year-old boy who had fallen in and sunk to the bottom, police reported.

Julius Scott, 3, son of Mrs. Evelyn Scott, 2735 S. 11th, was listed in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital Tuesday night.

Police said Scott, who cannot swim, was playing in the backyard at 2501 Woodleigh Lane when he fell into the swimming pool and sank to the bottom. Margaret A. Svoboda, 13, 2540 S. 17, jumped in and rescued him, police said.

Pearl Goldenstein absent. Prash said more revisions may be required next year, to conform with new court rulings.

In other business, the board unanimously approved an increase from $3.30 to $3.60 per square foot rent charged the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) for part of Whittier School and all of Bryan School. The new contract would generate about $510,000.

The action was a prelude to the board's need to raise rates for school building use by outside agencies, and to simplify the complex method to compute charges, Prash said. Rates now vary from $1-$2 hourly for classroom use and from $10-$60 for larger areas.

Costs To Rise

Prash said while utility and maintenance costs will be higher, necessitating the rate increase, he doesn't want to jeopardize relationships with agencies which use schools.

They used space for a total of 25,448 hours in 1974-75, while some free evening time would've produced about $50,000.

Prash questioned whether the district should subsidize such evening programs for SeTech, when it has its own tax-levying powers. "We have to be accountable to our own taxpayers," he said.

Yet he proposed that agencies such as Boy Scouts and the YMCA be allowed free use of school buildings as a public service, much as radio stations donate free air time.

By raising rates or charging SeTech extra, Prash warned that might force them to end popular programs which the public schools then would have to consider continuing. He urged caution in competing against SeTech or the University of Nebraska in adult programs.

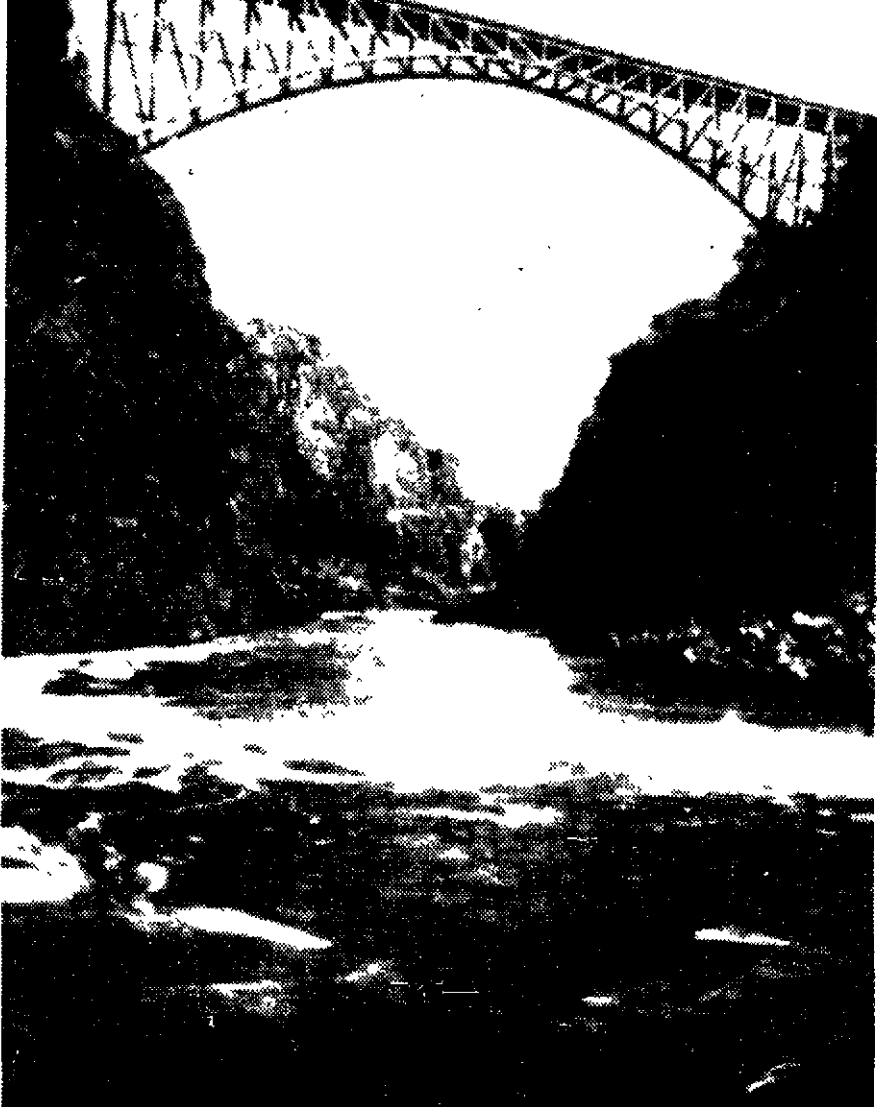

Sunday Rules

Prash also said rules on Sunday use of schools should be tightened up, to enforce the ban on religious services. Board members took no action in the preliminary rate and use review, to allow affected agencies to appear later before the board.

The board granted a City Parks and Recreation Department request to extend gymnasium use hours to 11:30 p.m.

Reporting on school construction projects, Prash said Lincoln High remodeling "is going slowly" with "lots of problems." He said, "They'll be in a mess most of the year attempting to operate school," but it can't be avoided.

Rhodesian Talks Scheduled... Whites, Blacks Agree

BRIDGE ON ZAMBESI... to be scene of talks.

Salisbury, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesia's white rulers and black nationalists will meet in a luxury railway coach on a bridge spanning Victoria Falls for talks which are expected to lead to black majority rule for the African nation.

The decision to start the constitutional conference by Aug. 25 was announced Tuesday after months of bickering over the meeting site.

The railroad car will be supplied by South Africa. The bridge where the talks will be conducted is on the border between black-ruled Zambia, which was called Northern Rhodesia during its British Empire days, and white-ruled Rhodesia, which was once called Southern Rhodesia.

Rhodesia's exiled black nationalists, fearing for their safety, wanted the talks held outside Rhodesia. Prime Minister Ian Smith, who unilaterally declared Rhodesia's independence from Britain nearly 10 years ago and has long declared "no black majority rule in my lifetime," wanted to talk inside the country.

The conference is expected to produce a formula leading to black majority rule in about three years based on gradual easing of the educational requirements for voting.

The alternative is a major escalation of the 30-month guerrilla war on Rhodesia's borders in which 596 guerrillas, 71 Rhodesian security troops and South African police and 267 civilians have already died.

Victoria Falls is one of Africa's greatest natural wonders. Every minute during the flood season, 141 million gallons of water drop 307 feet into the Zambesi River from a black basalt cliff more than a mile wide.

The spray often reaches a height of 1,650 feet and gives rise to the African name for the falls — Mosi Oa Tunya, or the Smoke that Thunders.

Spanning the gorge without a center support is a 657-foot road and rail bridge built in 1906, close enough to the falls for passengers to feel the spray.

A statement issued simultaneously in Rhodesia and Zambia, where many Rhodesian black nationalists are in exile, said the conference would begin without preconditions and would give both parties "the opportunity to publicly express their genuine desire to negotiate an acceptable settlement."

After an initial stage, the conference is scheduled to adjourn and committees will discuss settlement proposals which will be taken up at a formal meeting later — "anywhere decided upon."

The statement said white-ruled South Africa and the black-ruled nations of Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania and Zambia have all "expressed their willingness to ensure that this agreement is implemented by the two parties involved."

Prime Minister Smith and Bishop Abel Muzorewa, leader of the Rhodesian African National Council — the main black nationalist group — are expected to attend the opening talks.

The break-through on the site came following a meeting last weekend between Smith and Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa, who has been pressing Smith to settle with the black majority.

South Africa, long Rhodesia's financial and political supporter, has all but declared it favors black majority rule in Rhodesia and announced Aug. 1 it was pulling out all its paramilitary forces in the former British colony.

About 250,000 whites currently hold a monopoly of political power over some 5.4 million Africans in Rhodesia.

Britain, still the legal ruler of Rhodesia, would have to ratify any agreement before it comes effective.

Family Reports Ransom Ready

Yorktown Heights, N.Y. (AP)—The family of missing Seagram's whisky heir Samuel Bronfman 2d said Tuesday it has complied with all the demands made in a letter from kidnapers who reportedly sought $4.5 million in ransom.

A spokesman said the family was awaiting further instructions from the abductors of the 21-year-old Bronfman who has been missing since Saturday morning.

The spokesman said a "substantial" ransom had been gathered and that the next move was up to the kidnapers.

WCBS Radio quoted reliable sources as saying the letter demanded a $4.5 million ransom. The radio station said the letter also reported that young Bronfman was in a safe place with adequate air and water for 10 days.

The family spokesman declined to reveal the letter's other demands, but he noted that although the FBI and local officials were involved in the investigation, the family was proceeding with independent negotiations with the kidnapers.

Stahmer Donates To Petition Drive

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A $5,000 check was donated Tuesday by a former state senator to private school interests for a drive to get state money for educating handicapped students in private schools.

Dave Stahmer, vice president of Industrial Electrical Works of Omaha, said he turned the check over to officials of the Villa Marie school at a legislative committee meeting to initiate a petition drive to put the question on the 1976 spring ballot as a constitutional amendment.

The check presentation came near the close of the Legislature's Education Committee meeting into which funds appropriated for the education of handicapped students in the state were not being spent on students in parochial or private schools.

Earlier in the day, Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue, committee chairman, circulated copies of a constitutional amendment which would sanction aid to private schools for the education of handicapped students.

Much of the hearing focused on Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas who has ruled out state funds for the education of private school children, handicapped or otherwise, on the grounds the state constitution bans it.

Stahmer, who chose to run for state auditor in 1974 instead of re-election to the Legislature, said the plans for the constitutional amendment drive sprang out of Tuesday's meeting.

"The attorney general himself said this is the way to get this done," Stahmer said.

"Remember, I co-chaired the drive that ended in the defeat of Warner's bill," Stahmer said, referring to a $160 million state aid to education law which was repealed by the voters in 1974.

"This (petition drive to get the issue on the ballot) will be like candy. I'm confident of that," Stahmer said. "Forty-three other states provide this; I don't see why Nebraska can't."

Stahmer also blasted Lincoln School Supt. John Prash who he accused of "stirring up" opposition to the State Department of Education's contracting with private schools for the education of handicapped children.

"I know Lincoln's been behind it," he said in an interview.

To get the issue on the ballot, supporters of aid for private school children will have to notify the secretary of state's office. The 1974 repeal drive had to get 23,081 signatures in 38 counties to put the issue before voters.

In the end, they had collected signatures of 37,000 registered voters. Presumably, the private school aid issue would have to collect a similar number of signatures.

Douglas advised supporters of state money for the education of handicapped students in private schools, "You'll have to get a constitutional amendment; it's the only way. If the education of the child is not under the control of the state, it is unconstitutional."

He added, "My personal philosophy is just the contrary to what I have to say as an attorney."

Douglas noted that the state could provide special educational classes in private schools if the classroom is leased by the state and the teachers are hired by the state. He said he has made that suggestion to Omaha Public Schools in the past.

Judges Threaten Court Action If Budget Cut

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

It's not unusual for Lincoln city lawmakers to be hauled into court periodically, but on Tuesday they found out that their newest courtroom adversaries may be the Municipal Court judges. All four of them.

The judges told the City Council Tuesday they had no business cutting their budget. The council, in return, sent back the message, which in Chairman Max Denney's words, says, "We could, we did and they can go to court."

Apparently, the judges might do just that. At a budget session Monday the council chopped $25,000 out of the court's $608,880 salary account. The council cut another 5% out of the $168,565 operations account.

The judges sent the word to the lawmakers Tuesday, via messenger Bill Austin, chief deputy city attorney, that the court's total $854,308 budget should be adopted as is. Denney told Austin to go back and tell the judges the same message the judges told the council two years ago when the council suggested the judges hold night court.

"They told us to keep our cotton-picking hands off their business," Denney said, "and you can remind them that applies both ways."

Since the lawmakers proposed the judges hold night sessions and the two-year controversy over the construction of the fourth Municipal Courtroom, relations between the legislative and judicial branches of city government have been strained.

Judge Thomas McManus later told reporters that it is the position of "all four of the municipal judges" that the budget is reasonable. It is illegal for the council to trim it, he charged, because the courts constitute a separate branch of government.

McManus said he believes it would be unethical to make further comment at a time when the issue may go to litigation.

The council thinks it has the legal right to make the budgetary cuts, based on a legal opinion written in July by City Atty. Charles Humble.

Humble said it is the duty of the city to "provide suitable courtrooms, necessary equipment and room for the clerk of the court and necessary help."

"There appears to be nothing in the (state) statutes which would require the city to acquiesce to the judges' every request," Humble said.

The judges are a separate branch of government and have the job of setting basic policy on its operations. But, the city has a right to question the judges' proposed expenditures in the area of operations.

The City Council, as the legislative branch, can make budget reductions "in the interest of the public good where those reductions do not impair the ability of the courts to perform their functions," Humble concluded.

City Councilman Steve Cook thinks the cuts made in the municipal court's budget would not hamper the court's operations.

Cook pointed out that traffic cases are down 30% to 40% and said a reduction in the clerical staff would be justified. At a previous budget hearing Court Clerk Ken Wade argued that the same number of employees is needed to handle the workload which, he said, is increasing in other areas.

Israel Invites Confederation

By The Associated Press

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin suggested Tuesday a confederation between Israel and Jordan as one way to solve the Palestinian issue.

In an interview aired on Austrian television, Rabin reiterated Israel's objection to a separate Palestinian state but said:

"There can be no lasting peace in the area without a solution of the Palestinian issue. I believe there are many ways to do it... (including) a federation with Israel (of a Palestinian region) or a confederation between Israel and Jordan."

"I don't believe there is room for a third state between Israel and Jordan," he continued in the interview conducted Friday in Jerusalem. "Any attempt to have such a state would be a time bomb against both of us. It will have no other motive but to be used as a springboard for efforts to bring about the Councilman Bob Sikyta, who has been the leader in proposing numerous salary cuts, said he had hoped the judges would have accepted the reductions as a "challenge" to do a more efficient job.

"It irritates me the way they presented this like an order to us," Sikyta said. "We've been trying to cooperate with them."

Denney said the four judges always could restate their case at Thursday night's public hearing on the budget.

He said a condition for talks on the issue would be restoration of Jordan's right to negotiate for the Palestinians. The Arab summit last October empowered the Palestine Liberation Organization to act as sole representative of the Palestinians in any such negotiations.

In Cairo, officials said Egypt has turned again to the U.S. Navy for help in ridding beaches and coastal waters near the Suez Canal of mines and other explosives left over from two wars with Israel. Western diplomats said the use of Americans instead of Russians for the operation is another sign that Egypt wants peace.

Officials reported a team of 24 American demolition experts would arrive in Port Said at the northern end of the waterway Wednesday as an advance party for the

Sapir, One Of Israel's Founders, Dies

Jerusalem (AP) — Pinhas Sapir, a founding father of the state of Israel and one of its strongest political figures, died Tuesday while attending the dedication of a synagogue in a Negev Desert village. He was 68.

Sapir died of a heart attack during the ceremony. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was by his side when he collapsed.

His death was a severe blow to Israel doves, whom he led in demanding that Israel trade captured Arab land for peace settlements.

Although he held no political position when he died, Sapir was still regarded as the strongman of Rabin's Labor party, the man without whose blessing no one could win high government office.

He was Israel's finance minister for 11 years with one brief interruption and almost singlehandedly formed its economic system. Polish-born Sapir was regarded as the party kingmaker. He worked behind the scenes to bring Golda Meir and then Rabin to power.

Sapir outspokenly favored relinquishing Arab land captured in the 1967 Mideast war. He feared that by keeping these territories, Israel would absorb a population of one million Arabs who would destroy its Jewish character and turn it into a binational state.

Just a few months ago he joined a concerted effort by Labor party moderates to force Rabin into offering new concessions to the Arabs for a peace settlement. That campaign has weighed heavily on current negotiations for an accord with Egypt, in which Israel has eased its bargaining position.

Sapir often was attacked for

his fiscal methods. Millions were spent in unorthodox ways that cut red tape but also shocked bookkeepers. He managed to get things done, though not everyone understood just how. Some money filtered into private pockets and Sapir was blamed. But no one ever accused Sapir of profiting personally. He lived frugally, dedicated with singleminded intent to building the state.

He spoke in heavily accented Hebrew, ignoring grammar as coolly as he brushed aside criticism. "All these connoisseurs of good taste," he once grumbled, "I despise them."

He was often likened to Chicago Mayor and Democratic party strongman Richard Daley, and was dubbed "The Bulldozer."

Sapir visited Jewish communities all over the world, drumming up funds and luring immigrants to Israel. When he died he was chairman of the Jewish Agency, which handles immigration and foreign donations. He took the post after quitting the cabinet 14 months ago.

Sapir's death left 77-year-old Golda Meir virtually the last of the generation of East Europeans who immigrated to Palestine, built a state out of swamp and desert, and became its leaders.

Born Pinhas Koslovski, Sapir came to Palestine in 1929. A fiery labor leader, he was soon jailed by British authorities for organizing illegal strikes by Jewish workers. He joined the Hagana, the Jewish underground army, and became its quartermaster.

After holding senior Defense and Finance Ministry posts, he became commerce minister in 1955 and finance minister in 1963.

One office he could have had but never wanted was the premiership itself. The party saw him as Mrs. Meir's heir, but he refused all offers, preferring to work behind the scenes.

Evening Best Time For Biking

St. Petersburg, Fla., couple Louise and Jack Helms have discovered that the best time for going on a bike ride in these days of scorching heat is in the evening.

N.Y. Times Summary

Officers Claim 90% Support

Lisbon — Military officers petitioned President Francisco da Costa Gomes to end what they view as efforts by Premier Vasco Goncalves to turn Portugal into a Communist state on Eastern European lines. The petition's sponsors claimed 90% support in the armed forces. It was drawn up by nine officers suspended as members of the Revolutionary Council for creating divisions within the armed forces. The widespread and often violent campaign to oust the premier and the four-day-old cabinet picked up speed.

Panel Seeks Nixon Papers

Washington — The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence issued a subpoena seeking documents from President Nixon's papers for Sept. 4 to Dec. 3, 1970, dealing with what a qualified source called the "two-track" effort to keep Salvador Allende Gossens from becoming president of Chile. One was said to be through the Central Intelligence Agency, the other through military and diplomatic channels. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger testified for three hours before a closed session of the committee on his discussion and agreement with a CIA official not to support one plot to head off the Allende presidency as unworkable. Kissinger told reporters there was no policy or plot to assassinate any foreign leaders.

1953 Test Subject Died

New York — The Army disclosed that a 42-year-old patient at the New York State Psychiatric Institute died during an Army-sponsored experiment with hallucinogenic drugs in January, 1963. Elizabeth Barrett, a Manhattan widow, said the man was Harold Blauer, her father, a tennis professional. She said she was sure the drug was LSD but the Army and the institute's records indicated that the victim had been given derivatives of mescaline. She said she had been told the fatal dose was administered over her father's objection the day before he was to be discharged. A heart attack was given as the cause of death.

Police Use More Civilians

Washington — Urban police departments are increasingly using civilians in many positions. Figures collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation show that the percentage of civilians has increased from 7% in 1970 to 13.2% in 1972. A study by the Urban Institute projects further sharp increases, explained by the desire of police managers to free officers for "critical" police functions.

Attorneys For Joan Little Complete Defense Case

Raleigh, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for Joan Little rested their case Tuesday after the young black woman testified she fled for her life after stabbing a white jailer but would not have left had she known he was dying.

Miss Little, 21, said at the end of her four days of testimony that she stabbed 62-year-old Clarence Allgood with an ice pick — but did not mean to kill him and that he was alive when she left the cell — after he forced her to perform oral sex on him.

It was uncertain when the jury of six blacks and six whites would begin deliberating in the second-degree murder case. Defense counsel Milton Williamson predicted the case would go to the jury by Friday or Saturday and said, "We'll have a verdict by Saturday."

Wake County Superior Court Judge Hamilton Hobgood denied

a defense motion to dismiss the charge and declined to hear other arguments, including one for a directed verdict of not guilty.

"The court rules that there is a conflict in the evidence that must be resolved by the jury," Hobgood said.

The state says Miss Little stabbed Allgood 11 times as part of an escape plot on the morning of Aug. 27, 1974.

State rebuttal testimony was to begin Wednesday. Witnesses were to include a deputy sheriff and a state investigator who testified earlier.

Seconds after the dismissal motion was denied, two members of the North Carolina Black Panther Party were ordered from the courtroom. A bailiff said he heard one of them say "son of a bitch."

Both men denied making the statement and the bailiff admitted he did not know who said it. No charges were filed.

Under cross-examination earlier Tuesday, Miss Little testified that she did not know Allgood was mortally wounded. "If I had known he had been struck as many times as he had, I would have stayed there. It was not my intention to leave him to die there," she said Tuesday morning.

Over and over again Tuesday, prosecutor William Griffin pelted her with questions about why she never "screamed, hollered, slapped or run" when Allgood made sexual advances.

"Mr. Griffin, if you had been a woman, you wouldn't have known what to do, either. I didn't know whether he was going to kill me or not... I was scared so I just let him...," Miss Little said.

She testified Allgood threatened her with an ice pick, which she wrestled from him after performing oral sex for three to five minutes.

She said she was only sure that she had stabbed Allgood once, but she said she hit at him three or four times. She said his only comment during the struggle was "What the hell are you doing?"

Miss Little said Allgood was alive, standing in the doorway of her cell, when she last saw him.

Later, the prosecutor asked, "If you were fearful, why did you stop and turn around and look at Allgood?"

"I was trying to make up my mind whether I was going to leave or go back and help him," Miss Little said.

"And you slammed the door on him," said Griffin. She nodded her head affirmatively.

WAGNER IGA
33rd & "A"

WASHINGTON — To promote a "national dialogue" about issues and values in our bicentennial year, Walter Cronkite came up with a suggestion for a nationwide "American Issues Forum." That was a good idea.

To develop a wide-ranging reading list for this discussion, the Bicentennial Commission and the National Endowment for the Humanities turned to the American Library Association. That was a bad idea.

At a cost to taxpayers of $220,189, some eight million copies of a reading list are being distributed which testify to the intellectual and political bias of a group of librarians who evidently seek to rig the discussion of American issues by tilting the "approved" materials leftward.

In nearly every category, the librarians' lobby selects one of two unassailable classics, one sop to conservatives, and a half-dozen books that have an unmistakably liberal slant.

There is nothing wrong about recommending books with a liberal bent, or books critical of our institutions. But there is something very wrong about a pretense of debate: framing a "dialogue" with materials that preordain the winners, supported mainly by dollars from the predetermined losers.

Take the subject of the presidency. The classic on the recommended list is B. P.

Thomas' "Abraham Lincoln"; no problem there. The rightward bow is to Allen Drury for his novel "Advice and Consent." Then comes the liberal parade: "The American Presidency" by Clinton Rossiter, a good book that was the Kennedy administration's bible; two laudatory books about Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman; a record of "It Can't Happen Here," which is described as "the coming of a fascist dictatorship in America"; Dan Rather's "The Palace Guard," and Arthur Schlesinger Jr.'s "The Imperial Presidency."

All these books are worth reading, but would a reader come away from that set with anything but a liberal Democratic preference for the presidency?

Another field: The Congress. The librarians suggest the Federalist Papers and a couple of anecdotal histories of Congress, which is fine, and then: John F. Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage"; a Ralph Nader group special, "Who Runs Congress?"; John Gardner's "In Common Cause"; and a recording, "Point of Order," lacerating Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Once again: Tilt!

How about the business of America? Somewhere on the list is a book by laissez-faire economist Milton Friedman to show "balance," and then comes the recommended reading for the week of Feb. 22: a non-controversial "Today's Isms" by William Ebenstein, followed by the liberal parade: "The Power Elite" by C. Wright Mills, father of the New Left; "The Limits of American Capitalism," by Robert Heilbroner, the Spenglerian pessimist; "The New Industrial State" by John Kenneth Galbraith, who thinks the free enterprise system is a sham; "America, Inc." by Mintz and Cohen, who want to break up the Yankees; and "The Monopoly Makers," another Ralph Nader anti-business production.

Let's try for a fair shake in foreign affairs from our librarian list-makers. The classic is "American Notes" by Charles Dickens, and the affirmative sop is "Good Things About the U.S. Today" by the editors of U.S. News. Then comes the selfflagellating deluge, from "The Ugly American" to "Pax Americana," from "The Tragedy of American Diplomacy" to "The Best and the Brightest," from "The Captain America Complex" to the final selection in the hairshirt laundry, "The Crippled Giant" by J. William Fulbright.

These are hardly the most profound liberal books available, but how can anyone suggest that they form the basis for a balanced "national dialogue"? Three books by Ralph Nader's crew, and not one lonely title from Russell Kirk, Irving Kristol, Eric Hoffer or William Buckley? Current history by Woodward and Bernstein, and no "Kennedy Justice" by Victor Navsky? "The Selling of the President 1968" by liberal Joe McGinnis and not one edition of "The Making of the President" by centrist Theodore H. White? The librarians close their eyes to controversy. On the environment, they inundate us with "Silent Springs" but offer no titles on the effects of the anti-pollution campaign on jobs and energy. Dozens of books are recommended on the rights of the individual, but little counterbalancing material can be found on the rights of society or the need for national security. A list of books hall freedom of the press, but nowhere is there an intrusion on the adulation by press critics A. J. Leibling, Edward Jay Epstein or Edith Efron.

The "framework for discussion" is a frameup; the deck is stacked by academicians who fear the results of combat in the marketplace of ideas. Librarians will point to the conservative 10% of titles to show their "balance"; but the list, in its totality, reveals the bias of the people who control the purchase and display of a large portion of the books published in this country. The list lists to port. The National Endowment for the Humanities has been had, and ought to demand our money back or the cost-free publication of a supplemental list in a hurry. If the librarians can get away with their suppression of untrendy ideas, then the "American Issues Forum" will be seen by the people who hold the library cards as a national brainwashing.

Progress Is Possible

Not having the fourth Municipal Courtroom issue to kick around anymore — it apparently having finally been resolved — local officials are looking for other issues upon which to base contentious, long drawn-out arguments with mind-changing prerogatives liberally asserted.

A compromise finally was reached among court, city and county officials under which a fourth courtroom would be obtained by dividing a larger one. Of course, additional court-related space for both the municipal and county systems is still needed. But with a space need, study underway and a building administrator hired, lengthy disputes such as that over the courtroom might be a thing of the past.

City officials are now at loggerheads over the budget recommended by Mayor Boosalis. Late in the budget game this year the council has become increasingly economy-minded, or, some might say, cheap, and council majorities have been created in some instances to force dollar amount reductions from payroll accounts and across-the-board percentage cuts from operation, maintenance and capital outlay budget requests. Since this was not an ambitious spending document to start with, the question can be asked whether or not this is cutting for cutting's sake rather than a well-thought-out and specific excision of honest-to-goodness fat. Is it more of a game between council and mayor than a service to the taxpayers?

Budget squabbles, of course, are hardly perennials, but they are cut short each year by the legal necessity of adopting a budget for the next fiscal period.

Not so with many other issues with which officials come to grips — or dodge, as the mood strikes them.

It seems like city officials and interested professionals have taken years in discussing the putting together of a detoxification center and other alcohol-treatment programs which the city might help to sponsor. Perhaps it has been years, maybe only a little more than one, but decisions have not been reached. But this is not one of your frontline, glamour issues. Like correctional reform, the treatment of alcoholics as a government service and/or duty does not rank as an apple of the public's eye.

Another area in which city officials have been bickering of late is the long-sought reorganization of the Community Development Department and along with that, whether or not and what kind of special attention should be devoted to economic development and transportation problems. Agreement seems to turn to disagreement repeatedly and we wonder again if this particular item is not the political football we have thought it to be all along.

These problems are not insoluble for people of ability, which our local officials have, and good will, which some may have temporarily misplaced.

Speaking Her Mind

Does President Ford, who like former Atty Gen. John Mitchell smokes a pipe, have the same Mitchellian tendency to bite the stem in two when he hears his wife speak to the media?

When Martha talked, John burned. Ford at least might take on a nervous twitch as the national and international reaction to the First Lady's recent television interview sets in. No comment from the President thus far. A spokesman says Ford only reiterated his position that Betty Ford "should speak her mind." That is very person of the President, in our book.

Mrs. Ford broached two subjects not talked about in public by the likes of Bess, Mamie or Pat: premarital sex and abortion — both of which, with reservations, she agrees with. For talk like that she could be thrown out of a Miss America contest.

And according to several church figures and right-to-life people, hers was a horrible example and indicative of the moral slump our civilization supposedly is suffering through.

Regardless of Mrs. Ford's positions on the subject matter in controversy, we are happy to hear her talking out. There are things, as daughter Susan says, that need to be "brought out of the woods." Pretending certain conditions don't exist by ignoring them is not a good example, either.

For not imitating the usual First Lady plastic presentation and for actually saying something of substance, Betty Ford deserves medals for courage and originality.

JACK ANDERSON

Rocky Sings VP Blues

WASHINGTON — The outwardly ebullient Nelson Rockefeller, according to close friends, is suffering from the vice presidential blues.

This is a malady which afflicts normal, healthy politicians who wind up in the void of the vice presidency.

Theirs is not the ennobling power to shape bold national policies or the awesome authority to make great decisions. It is their unhappy fate to wait in the White House wings for a tragedy they pray will never happen.

Woodrow Wilson's running mate, Thomas Marshall, described the malady best. The vice president, he said, "is like a man in a cataleptic state. He cannot speak; he cannot move; he suffers no pain. And yet he is conscious of all that goes on around him."

Vice President Rockefeller apparently has come down with this occupational disease. He tries not to show it, his friends say, but down deep, he is frustrated.

For Rockefeller, who is accustomed to exercising power, now occupies a position without power. Friends say he is chafing over his new political impotence.

The friends agree Rockefeller also has a combative, competitive streak. He became rankled, for example, over some recent cracks attributed to President Ford's campaign manager, Howard "Bo" Callaway.

Rockefeller had agreed it would be good political strategy to keep the vice presidential nomination open. But Callaway was quoted in the newspapers as calling Rockefeller a problem and hinting he might be dumped.

'Let's Not Get Involved'

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

NEW YORK — The Episcopal church, which is having its troubles with 11 "irregularly ordained" women priests who keep wanting to celebrate the Mass, is only beginning to find out what happens to institutions that relegate females to second-class citizenship.

There are early rumblings that now the altar guilds may be getting into the act. And that, fellow sinners, could shake up organized religion in ways Martin Luther never thought of.

It's one thing to have the ladies nudge canon law by distributing bread and wine. Bishops, many of whom favor the ordination of women as priests anyway, can always announce that they are "deeply distressed" and call for an investigation.

They can even — and two already have — order up trials for any priest bold enough to let women celebrate Holy Communion in their churches. But let the ladies of the congregation get their backs up and you've got real trouble. It's enough to have every Episcopal priest and vestryman in the land huddling in emergency session.

And it's the idea of Jane Gilliat Fry, a lifelong Episcopalian and a granddaughter and great-granddaughter of Episcopal and Anglican clergymen from Skaneateles, N.Y.

She is, she says, "both saddened and infuriated" that timid elements of the clergy have used their power to maintain the church as a men's club with, however, a hard-working women's auxiliary "while admitting that the action is in opposition to their conscience as Christians."

"Well, it's time to wake up a bunch of smugly somnolent church authorities to the fact that hundreds of women are sorely aggrieved and absolutely determined to be recognized as full members of the church. Or else."

It's that "or else" that brings out the big guns. Mrs. Fry is calling on women to wield the clout they have been "too nice" to use before.

MIKE ROYKO

CHICAGO — I didn't believe her. It wasn't that I thought she was making the story up. But I was sure there had to be something important she was leaving out.

Her name is Sally Warren and she owns the Highland Park Racquet Club, a big tennis plant on the North Shore. Mrs. Warren is a widow. Her husband died last year of cancer. And that's what her story was about.

During his illness, Warren was treated by a physician at the University of Wisconsin, who is connected with that university's cancer research program.

When he realized he wasn't going to make it, Warren asked his wife that something be done to show their gratitude for the excellent although futile treatment he received.

After his death, Mrs. Warren went ahead with plans to fulfill his wishes.

She decided to raise money — hopefully a large sum — to be given to the cancer research program at the U. of W. She had a good idea for raising the money.

Arthur Ashe, who recently had the dramatic Wimbledon victory in England, is a friend of hers. He agreed to play a fund-raising exhibition match with Marty Riessen, another well-known player.

At first, she planned to hold the match in her own club. But it wouldn't only 300 spectators, so the take wouldn't be more than a few thousand dollars. And with a draw like Ashe, she was sure she could attract thousands of fans.

So she decided the best place for it would be McGraw Hall on the campus of Northwestern University in Evanston.

It has a large capacity and is on the North Shore, where tennis is extremely big and the people can afford to pay $10 a person and $25 a family, which Mrs. Warren planned to charge.

Mrs. Warren contacted Northwestern and told them about her idea. Naturally, she offered to pay rent for McGraw Hall. She wasn't asking for something for nothing.

"We must," she says, "immediately withdraw our services as ironers of vestments, teachers of church school, servers of parish dinners, raisers of funds and, most important, persuaders of reluctant spouses to contribute generously."

"And of course we must not, from this moment on, contribute one penny of our own money to support a religious establishment that admittedly acts in opposition to what it knows is right. A lot of good people are going to be hurt by this, but it's the only way."

Well, now, Mrs. Fry is getting right down to where the action is. As a grizzled veteran of parish guilds, I have often wondered how the church would get along without us "little old ladies."

Do you realize, for instance, that it takes four hours to launder an altar cloth? That it's something like 20 feet long and that not one inch of that 20 feet is allowed to touch the floor? The secret is to set up the ironing board next to your bed.

Up to this point, I saw no reason to doubt her story. It was the next part that didn't ring true.

Mrs. Warren said Northwestern told her she could hold the match at McGraw Hall. But only if the money she raised was turned over to Northwestern, not to the University of Wisconsin. It said it, too, had a cancer research program.

After talking to Mrs. Warren, I was sure there had to be more to it than that. So Northwestern was asked for its side.

There wasn't any more to it than that. It was true. Northwestern says it won't rent McGraw Hall to Mrs. Warren unless she turns the money over to N.U.

Robert Kurz, assistant athletic director, said: "It is the position of the university that if it is made of the facilities for the benefit of research, then if the university participates in that research, its needs should be met first."

He says this is a "long-standing" policy, set by the university president.

Who, if the ladies go on strike, will struggle to get long skirts, starched collars and black silk bows on squirming choir boys? Who will pour tea at receptions... cook pot-luck suppers... knit those goodies for the bazaar... raise money for those good causes? Because, as any parish treasurer can tell you, "the ladies" are good for tens of thousands of dollars a year that he can't get any place else. My favorite church job and I've done 'em all, from vacuuming the sanctuary to teaching (?) 10-year-old boys was in a parish-sponsored shop where, six days a week, volunteers sold and gift-wrapped purchases by the general public.

Our annual profits ran into five figures — and it all went into the church budget. So if Mrs. Fry's call to action catches on, it could juggle things from the pulpit to the parish kitchen. "And why not?" she asks. "After all, in the new trial liturgy, they've rewritten the Lord's Prayer. If they're willing to give up that tradition, why not the one against women priests?"

KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

Potomac August

WASHINGTON — Another typical August is underway in Washington. The trees are already a dusty, copperish green, and the air inversions have brought a little bit of Los Angeles to old Maryland. Day lilies labeled August-blooming by Connecticut nurseries have already bloomed and gone, somehow aware in their Yankee leaves and stems that a Potomac August is to be avoided.

In the old days, the politicians and government officials also left the capital for the summer. Those not going home went to the mountains, especially to the springs — the fashionable resorts at White Sulphur Springs, Bedford Springs and others.

Alas, Washington is no longer so leisurely. For the last three summers, most of us have stayed here, watching George McGovern extend and withdraw his 1,000% support for Tom Eagleton (1972), following the Watergate revelations and Ervin Committee furor (1973), and seeing it all come together in the August, 1974, resignation of Richard Nixon and the accession of Gerald Ford.

This August promises to be different — Brazilian in climate as usual, but quiet assuming that Portugal, Israel and the Arabs can last another month without war, civil or international. Congress has already left for home, and for one month will be confined to indulging home-state politics instead of diplomatic meddling, energy ignorance and economic irresponsibility.

August is also a month when Washington's bureaucrats tend to be gone. Phone calls ring down empty corridors. Again, hardly anybody is complaining. The average official costs taxpayers less on a paid vacation than at his desk.

Still, many journalists find the current calm difficult to take.

But others of us find the quiet, relaxed atmosphere pleasant — a time for strawberries, lemonade, beaches and beer. After all, it is probably the quiet before the storm, the eye of the ideological hurricane.

The political calendar is already creeping up on us. After seven months of partisan squabbling, the U.S. Senate, finding itself unable to decide who won last November's election in New Hampshire, has ordered a new election to be held in September. And no sooner will that contest be over than New Hampshire (and the rest of us) will turn to another.

Even now, as Senate candidates Louis Wyman and John Durkin begin their repeat combat, a half-dozen White House hopefuls are already poking around the state, getting ready for the nation's earliest Presidential primary (March 2 — or possibly even before then if New Hampshire is pressed to retain first-in-the-nation primary status): The furor of 1976 is almost upon us.

Church Needs Its 'Little Old Ladies'

Northwestern's 'Policy' Unbelievable

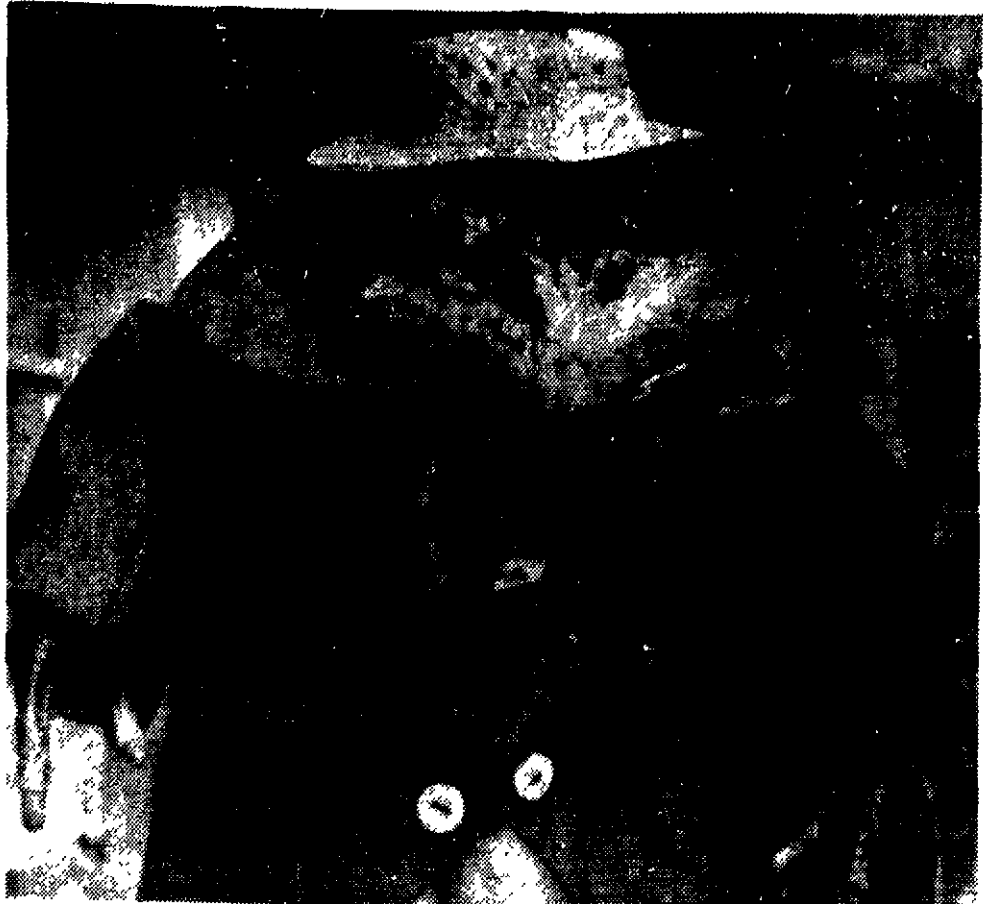

Unbelievable. And, I might add, smug and crummy.

It ought to be obvious that there is more to Mrs. Warren's plan than just raising money for cancer. There are very human, emotional reasons for her wanting the money to go to the University of Wisconsin.

Policy? I'll tell you what the rigid use of "policy" to cover any situation reminds me of. During the 1960s, I saw red-necked Southern deputies and Northern big-city cops hitting people on their heads for singing civil rights songs or shouting peace slogans. Every one of them said: "I'm just doing my job." If they had said: "It's policy," it would have meant the same thing. It not only is a good excuse for not thinking, but also for not feeling.

I assumed that university presidents are smarter than red-necked deputies. And that just shows how smart I ain't.

CALYPSO DANCER . . . ready to go a-courtin'.

Frogs Best-Dressed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Clarence McKosky's frogs are the best-dressed in town.

In the five years he has been designing fashions for frogs, McKosky has come up with a croaking calypso dancer, a swaggering cavalier and a buxom Playboy-style Bunny — complete with long pink ears, cottontail, pushup bra and high heels.

"The most difficult part is fitting the pattern," McKosky said. "You have to be careful not to stick them with pins."

Another problem is dressing the frogs in the completed costumes.

"You have to take care not to break their legs," he said. "But once you get the pants fully on, there's not much they can do, and they know it."

McKosky, a 39-year-old mail clerk for the University of California at San Diego, started designing clothes for frogs after he failed as a froggy coach.

At a San Dieguito Jaycees fund-raising event six years ago, McKosky picked a contestant at the rent-a-frog booth, only to see his charge fail miserably in the jumping competition.

The next year McKosky switched to the best-dressed frog contest, where he has been a three-time winner. He brings his own frogs, with their outfits individually tailored.

McKosky's mother, a former dressmaker, is a big help.

"All I ask is that I be allowed to wear gloves during the fittings," she said.

McKosky, a bachelor, said he dresses frogs primarily for the fund-raising project. "It's fun, but I wouldn't want to do it all year long," he said.

McKosky gets his frogs from a biological supply house. After agonizing fittings and one moment of glory, they are set free.

"When it's over, I figure they've earned their freedom, so I let them go at a secret location," he said.

However, he kept one of the frogs this year and lets him jump around in the back yard.

Oil-Producing Nations Buy Arms, Hardware

NEW YORK (AP) — Military hardware, manufactured goods and construction equipment are the goods most sought after by the oil-producing nations.

With nearly $100 billion in oil revenues last year, the nations belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) increased imports by about 70 per cent to $36 billion, according to figures compiled by the U.S. State Department. Another $14 billion was paid for services.

It is to pay for these imports, and their increasing cost, that OPEC countries claim they need even higher oil prices beginning this September.

Because of poor trade statistics for OPEC lands, commodity-by-commodity import figures for 1974 are unavailable. However, from U.S. export statistics it is possible to indicate in rough terms what the OPEC nations are buying.

Arms make up a big part of the total. The Pentagon says U.S. arms sales to OPEC nations during fiscal 1974 totaled $4.4 billion, double 1973 shipments. Other countries also sold the oil nations arms.

More than half, or $3.8 billion, or Iran's $7.2 billion import bill last year was for U.S. arms, the Pentagon says, while Saudi Arabia purchased $588 million in military goods.

In the first 10 months of fiscal 1975, the Defense Department says Iran bought $2.4 billion and Saudi Arabia $1.1 billion of U.S. armaments, while Kuwait increased its purchases to $365 million from $18 million in 1974.

Most other imports by OPEC countries have been for national development, construction of housing and factories, port facilities and transportation systems.

"They are importing to build their countries," said J. Richard Pryor, president of a small New York export house which specializes in automotive repair equipment.

OPEC import prices have not risen as fast as oil prices. A Treasury Department study concluded that the price of OPEC's imports has increased 220 per cent since 1955, while crude oil costs have risen more than tenfold.

And a recent United Nations study found that raw commodity price increases — excluding petroleum — have outstripped price gains of manufactured goods in 11 of the last 15 years.

According to the Commerce Department, U.S. exports of transportation equipment to the oil producers nearly doubled last year to $925 million, while shipments of iron and steel products surged to $481 million from $159 million.

Total U.S. exports to OPEC advanced 80 per cent from 1973 to a record $8.1 billion, the Commerce Department said.

Bankers here expect OPEC's imports of goods and services to continue to rise by as much as 20 per cent a year as a result of mammoth development plans proposed in Iran, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela. Saudi Arabia, for example, is completing details of a $140 billion plan that will emphasize road construction, housing, hospitals and schools and industrial development.

Venezuela, with iron and coal reserves as well as oil, plans a major steel complex.

Whether the oil nations carry out their plans depends, of course, on oil revenues, inflationary trends and the cooperation of the industrialized world.

At least one oil economist, Walter Levy, doubts the OPEC lands can maintain their import pace. Port and transport congestion, lack of labor, and money problems will cause the oil

Shutdown Date Set By Clemency Board

Washington (UPI) — The Presidential Clemency Board will close shop next month, one day short of its first birthday, becoming one of the few federal agencies to finish its business in a year, board chairman Charles Goodell said Tuesday.

Goodell told a news conference President Ford had so far been sent the names of 1,000 opponents of the Vietnam war recommended for pardons. "The President has accepted the recommendation of the Clemency Board in every instance so far," he said.

Goodell said the Clemency Board — which deals only with persons already punished for offenses related to opposition to the war — had received applications from 15,000 to 16,000 eligibles or about 12% of all those who could qualify. It stopped accepting applications March 30.

"The board will definitely finish processing all of these cases and go out of existence by Sept. 15, becoming one of the few federal agencies to go out of existence in the short space of one year," Goodell said. Ford created the board last Sept. 16 with the stipulation it go out of business at the end of 12 months.

Goodell said the board has acted on 12,000 cases so far and will now send them to Ford in packets of 1,000 or more.

Goodell said that roughly one-fourth of the veterans applying were "individuals who served valiantly in Vietnam and subsequently got into trouble when they came home."

About 66% of the draft evasion cases, he said, involved applicants who had "substantial conscientious objection to the war but were unable to obtain proper C.O. status."

Goodell said 50% of the applicants handled so far have received outright pardons, 20% were required to complete 3-6 months of low paid public service work before getting pardons, 16% were required to serve between six and 12 months of alternative service and "a very few" applicants were required to serve over a year.

Only 6% have received a decision of "no clemency" from the board, Goodell said.

The clemency program, Goodell said, "has succeeded in closing the chapter on Vietnam."

Goodell said the thousands to be pardoned "will receive a significant benefit which should help them move back into society . . . with no shame."

Goodell said, "I personally feel the program should be extended by Congress," but he added that he did not believe Congress would extend it or vote universal and unconditional amnesty.

CELEBRATING OUR 50th YEAR

2 Policemen, 3 Inspectors Gunned Down In Mexico

Mexico City (UPI) — Operating in gangland style, five silent men dressed in black machine-gunned two policemen and three federal inspectors to death Tuesday as they sat breakfasting in a small restaurant. Another policeman and a waitress were wounded, police said.

The killers fled without saying a word in a stolen car which they abandoned eight blocks away, a police spokesman said.

Police Col. Jorge Obregon Lima, chief of the investigation division, said, "There is no doubt that the killers are members of those extremist groups which have been carrying out this type of murder (against police) in recent months."

The three inspectors of the Department of Industry and Commerce, were wearing civilian clothes. All the police were uniformed.

Police said witnesses reported that the three policemen and three inspectors were eating breakfast in a restaurant in the "Ignacio Zaragoza" market near Mexico City International Airport when five men wearing black shirts and pants walked in carrying machine guns and opened fire.

A massive police hunt for the gunmen was launched, including the use of helicopters.

First reports from police said four policemen were the victims. But an official spokesman later said two policemen and three federal inspectors died.

In an apparently unrelated incident — about 40 minutes after the shootings — a small bomb went off at the National Bank of Mexico's branch bank in the Tacuba section of the capital, minutes before it was scheduled to open for business at 10 a.m.

Two persons were reported slightly injured by the blast which went off in the doorway of the bank, police said.

The bloodiest of a recent series of attacks on police occurred last April when guerrillas staged a bank robbery during which eight policemen and four civilians were killed.

Last month authorities reported that four members of that group were killed in two separate confrontations with police.

108 Killed In Philippine Fighting

Manila, The Philippines (UPI) — At least 108 persons were killed, including 31 civilians who were hogtied and massacred in a single atrocity, in renewed fighting between Moslem secessionist rebels and government forces in two southern provinces, military sources said Tuesday.

The sources said the massacre took place in Wao, a remote Christian town in Lanao del Sur province, 550 miles south of Manila, on Friday.

They said Moslem rebels ambushed a truck carrying 34 civilians, killing one. The others were hogtied and brought to Tikalaan village in neighboring Bukidnon province where they were gunned down. There were two survivors, they said.

Spanish Police Locate Hideouts Of Separatists

Madrid (UPI) — Police uncovered a network of guerrilla hideouts Tuesday in a region of Spain where Generalissimo Francisco Franco is vacationing and seized a great quantity of arms, ammunition and explosives, the national news agency Cifra said.

One alleged member of Spain's most violent guerrilla group, Basque Homeland and Liberty, was shot and killed by police in a rooftop chase in the same area, Cifra said. At least three others were arrested.

The reported guerrilla network of five hideouts was discovered in Galicia on the northwestern Atlantic coast — the first time that the Basque group's operations were reported in that part of Spain. Cifra did not say whether the activity was connected with Franco's presence in the port town of La Coruna where he is spending a six-week golfing and yachting vacation.

The reported ETA hideouts were discovered in La Coruna, and the nearby towns of El Ferrol del Caudillo, Lugo and Santiago de Compostella.

The Basque Homeland group is fighting for the creation of an independent socialist state from Spain's northern provinces. Police have blamed the organization for a long string of bombings, kidnappings and assassinations including the 1973 bomb slaying of Premier Luis Carrero Blanco.

Cifra said the suspected ETA member identified as Jose Ramon Repora, was shot and killed as he climbed over a roof to reach an ETA hideout in a building in the central Jose Antonio street.

The agency also said three other alleged members of ETA — all with long records of political violence — were arrested Monday in the town of Lugo, 60 miles from La Coruna. Cifra said the three had a sub-machine gun, three guns and ammunition hidden in their car.

Fighting had raged at Wao, a town of about 16,000, since Aug. 4 when about 500 rebels raided its village of Frankfort and set houses ablaze. Unofficial sources said more than 50 persons died in that attack.

Brig. Gen. Mario S. Espina, the zone commander, said Wao is a Christian town in a predominantly Moslem land. He said fighting in the area was caused by land conflicts and vendettas between Christian and Moslem vigilantes.

Dove Hunters Keeping Quiet On Fall Hunt

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

In the hierarchy of hunters, the dove hunter in Nebraska has held a niche only slightly more respectable than a poacher.

Consequently, hunters aren't broadcasting their enthusiasm for this fall's dove season, the first in Nebraska in more than 20 years.

For fear of being labeled "bloodthirsty," as some people consider dove hunters, these latent, or closet, dove hunters hoping to bag the symbolic bird of peace this fall are speaking softly.

So don't be surprised if 10-20,000 dove hunters take to the fields this Sept. 1-30.

This first season is expected to produce a harvest of roughly 400,000 doves and could rekindle Nebraska's interest in dove hunting.

Homeowners Wonder

Homeowners who enjoy sharing their eaves with a family of doves each summer wonder how people could hunt the dove.

What they probably don't realize is that the dove is considered perhaps the most sporting gamebird in Nebraska. Nationwide, mourning doves are the most widely hunted gamebird.

Their small size, rapid wing speed (35 m.p.h.) and darting and dodging motions make doves a real test of a marksman's ability.

Dick Turpin, Game & Parks official who has hunted dove in Kansas, says, "There are times I'm convinced they can duck a shot pattern."

Doves won't be easy pickings, agrees Ken Johnson, chief of Game & Parks terrestrial wildlife division. Johnson has only hunted doves once. That was a number of years ago in Illinois, and Johnson confesses, "I didn't bag a single one."

As a result, Johnson believes there are going to be a lot of frustrated dove hunters who will welcome quail and pheasant season with open arms.

Lead Important

"Getting the proper lead down on doves is going to be difficult for first-timers," he said.

In addition to their sporting virtues, mourning doves are among the most numerous of Nebraska wildlife, ranging from Harrison to Falls City.

Johnson was at a loss to pin a total on the number of doves other than to say they number in the millions.

This abundance of doves is important to hunters at a time when pheasant populations are declining and the destruction of habitat for gamebirds and waterfowl forces hunters to drive farther and farther with fewer opportunities to fire a shot.

The advent of dove hunting will mean more action closer to home, Johnson said.

"Unlike other hunting, the dove hunter won't go all day without firing a shot," Johnson said. "It has great potential."

Weather Fine

Of interest to frost-nubbed pheasant hunters, the September dove season assures hunters of relatively warm weather.

Dove hunting is also well-suited to varying hunting styles. For instance the hunter who isn't fond of walking can position himself near a pond where doves water and wait for them to fly past.

On the other hand, hunters can walk harvested grain fields and the edges of shelterbelts as they would for pheasant and quail.

Johnson said these are the most productive hunting techniques, adding that early mornings and late afternoons will be the best times.

Identification of doves should not pose a problem, Johnson added. Doves are gray with long, pointed tails, long necks and small heads (hence the name turtle dove). They make a whistling noise in flight.

Once You've Got Those Doves, Turn Them Into A Tasty Meal

Once you've bagged doves, their comparatively small size may cause you to wonder if they're worth the effort for eating.

Though small, doves have firm, dark meat, it usually requires two or three doves to make a meal for one person. Turpin was hard-pressed to describe the flavor, other than to say anybody who doesn't like doves has to be "pretty finicky" about food.

Here are some easy recipes for dove.

Dove Casserole

12 doves
salt & pepper
flour
1/3 cup butter or margarine a small onion, minced
2 carrots, chopped
fresh parsley, chopped
1 cup chicken bouillon
1/2 cup white wine

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Split birds down the back and salt and pepper before dusting birds lightly in flour. Sauté birds in skillet, turning frequently until brown on both sides. Place birds in a lidded casserole dish, pouring skillet drippings over the birds. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and bake for 45 min. (serves 4-5).

Dove Spaghetti

3-4 tablespoons olive oil
6-8 doves

3 buds garlic
1 large onion, chopped
1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 small can tomato paste
1 bay leaf mushrooms salt and pepper
grated romano cheese

Brown doves quickly in skillet with olive oil. Remove birds and set aside. Add garlic and chopped onion and fry until golden. Add tomato and tomato paste with two or more cans of water. Add bay leaf, mushrooms and salt and pepper to taste. Simmer and immediately add the doves. Cook slowly until doves are tender. Serve doves with spaghetti and romano cheese (allow 2-3 doves per person).

Dove Breasts Stroganoff
12-18 whole doves
1 onion, diced
1 can condensed cream celery soup
1 4-ounce can mushrooms
Oregano, rosemary and salt and pepper to taste
2 teaspoons Kitchen Bouquet
1 cup sour cream

Preheat oven to 325 degrees.

Place breasts in large baking dish. Sauté onion in skillet adding remaining ingredients except sour cream. Pour over doves and bake for one hour in covered dish, turning breasts occasionally. Add sour cream and stir. Bake uncovered for 20 min.

Serve over rice (serves 6).

Attention Hunters! Take Heed Of These Reminders

For those interested in hunting dove, here are a few reminders from the Game & Parks Commission:

- Doves cannot be hunted from the roadside.
- Doves must be shot in flight.
- State recreation areas will be closed to dove hunting.

Doves may be hunted in state special use areas, contact the commission for a list of such areas:

- The daily bag limit is 10, the possession limit is 20.
- Upland gamebird stamps are not needed to hunt doves.
- Hunt early in the season. As it progresses, more doves will be migrating south.
- Always get permission to hunt on private land.

Corot To Be Honored
Paris (UPI) — The Orangerie Des Tuileries, in the Tuileries Gardens, is staging an exhibition in tribute to Corot, the Impressionist painter. The exhibition, marking the 100th anniversary of Corot's death, includes 120 paintings and 60 drawings from French and foreign collections. It includes a cross section of his Italian Period, landscapes from the Valois region and women's figures from the ultimate phase of his creative life. Corot's admirers may also see a less known aspect of the master's creations — religious and historic paintings.

Back Pain Misery A Frequent Ailment

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

Back ache got you down? Bad backs are, in fact, the second most frequent ailment — next to the common cold, reported Parade magazine in a recent issue.

The troubles can be attributed to one of a multitude of reasons, said Dr. William A Seng, Lincoln chiropractor.

Isolating the symptoms is a piece of cake. "The symptoms of back ache are just plain hurt," Seng said.

A back problem isn't gone today, here tomorrow — much less here today, gone tomorrow, he said.

It "can be just like a tooth cavity. You don't get it overnight . . . you don't know you have it at first."

Not until you bend over to pick up a heavy box — or just to tie your shoe.

Once the pain hits, you then begin wondering about what brought it on. And the list of possible causes is as long as your arm — or spine.

Seng said back problems can be due to an accident, overlifting, a fall, poor posture, congenitally weak muscle structure, the nature of your job and, yes, even exercise.

Seng said he has treated a geologist who, for years, had the job of standing beside an oil drill, bending over occasionally to take samples of the gooey substance.

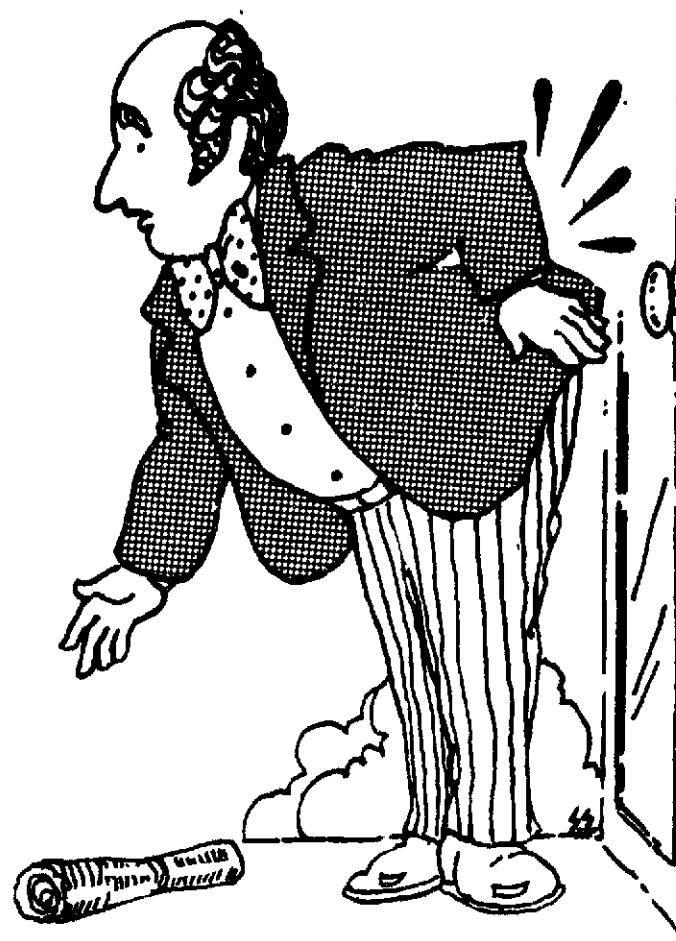

And he has treated yoga instructors, weight lifters, youngsters in gymnastics and aerobics classes and even followers of Jack LaLanne.

"There is no simple black and white cause," he concluded.

Once a back starts nagging, "People let it go, simply because no one is educated in how important the back is and how to use it correctly," he said.

"Most people apply heat" to a sore back, go to bed and return to their bad habits, he said. "That's not the way."

Since the spine encases nerves that control all bodily functions, back problems affect the nerves. Left untended, a back ailment can hamper a proper nerve supply and, hence, correct functioning of any or all organs, he said.

YMCA Program Aims At Back Pain Victims

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

"I bet you one of every ten people has back problems," speculated Bob Grenfell, program executive for the Downtown YMCA.

He was discussing the Y's most recent addition to its series of fall classes.

Called the "Y's Way to a Healthy Back," the program was developed by a New York specialist whose theory is that "more than 80% of all back problems are due to muscular deficiency rather than slipped disks" or other causes.

The specialist, Hans Kraus, worked in conjunction with the New York YMCA director to get the program off the ground in YM classes.

The program comes here after a two-year premier run in New York.

Daily Practice

It's not a work-now-forget-it-later series of lessons. Far from it. Rather, students have their homework — they are required to do their exercises daily, Grenfell said. "It takes one-half hour at the most."

The results of the two-year pilot running of the course are astounding, he said. "Eighty percent of the participants showed no sign of back problems" as revealed by a follow-up study.

The latter is based on a test developed by Kraus and another physician. Its aim is to predict potential back troubles by putting the subject through a series of six exercises to gauge a person's flexibility and muscular strength.

Rather simple, they. One exercise calls for the exerciser to hold his feet six to ten inches off the ground for ten seconds; another calls for both straight- and bent-leg sit ups; yet another has the subject lift the trunk of his body off the floor. And on they go.

Students enrolling in the course are required to run through those exercises and to complete a "back history form" with such data as the history and type of back pain, present complaints and surgery, if any.

Causes Given

In an interview, Grenfell said that back problems are due to lack of muscular buildup and tension as well as other ailments.

"If you've had a hard day, where does it all go?" he said. "To your neck, shoulders, back."

That's because tension prohibits muscular relaxation. Hence, they are contracted and, if left over a long period of time, they remain shortened.

Kraus and company tried out their six-point test on 5,000 American youths — and 57% failed.

They then tried it on European youths and came up with similar results. The more they tried it around the world, the more they found that the less mechanized the country, the less existing or potential back trouble, Grenfell said.

Less mechanized countries call for more physical exertion. Hence, less muscle shortening.

In addition, tension often accompanies mechanization.

Relaxation is the key to eliminating back troubles, Grenfell said. In the course of the six-week series of classes, students are taught, through exercise, the difference in feeling between relaxation and tension.

They're made to relax.

She Searches In Vain For Trucker's Work

(c) Chicago Daily News
Chicago, Aug. 6 — Marianne Revel's search for a truck driving job has been about as rewarding as driving a semi down an urban expressway on Friday afternoon.

Her ambition to become an over-the-road driver has been curbed by the recession and a general reluctance to hire women drivers.

Six months ago, the 28-year-old woman was driving a big gasoline tank truck to support herself and her 10-year-old son Mike.

She quit that job because "someone told me there was a good chance at getting an over-the-road (freight hauling) job."

The economy down-shifted, and she was caught without a job.

Being 5-foot-3 and all of 135 pounds doesn't exactly get you through the front door in an industry with a machismo image.

"When I was driving tankers, the other drivers used to kid me that if they took away my 'driving pillow' and big boots, I'd never be able to touch the pedals," she said.

Any financial cushion she might have had against the recession was eaten up by the cost of truck driving school (where officials said she had an excellent record).

"When I tried a couple years ago for a police job, they told me I was an inch too short. When I tried to get a job with one of the big bus companies, they said I was four inches too short."

"I can understand that not too many firms are hiring, but those that are always come up with something like: 'Well, I don't know about a woman driver . . . I'll have to check with my superiors.' They never call back."

Dear Mr. Becker: This deal was played in the expert game at New York City's most prestigious bridge club. As you undoubtedly know, the bridge played there is extremely serious, very high-level, and even grim at times. No quarter is ever asked for or given.

South was a player who had been winning just about everything in sight both in national and regional tournaments. This of course gave him a feeling of absolute superiority, and because his partner was just a plain, ordinary, run-of-the-mill player (and even less than that in South's eyes) it was perhaps understandable that South went in for some fancy shenanigans, as follows, to wit:

West led the ten of spades, dummy's king losing to the ace, and back came the jack of spades. West took the queen and cashed the 9-8, so that South lost 300 points instead of gaining the 1,730 points in his side could have scored.

For once the schmo in the North seat was able to lecture his famous partner on the subject of crazy bids, namely, that spade monstrosity on Round 2. And, for once, South was silent. North ran out of steam after a while, the East-West pair scored a game, and that was the end of the incident until . . .

"Pardon me," said one of the kibitzers to South, and there was enough oil in his voice to light all the lamps in China, "but on that slam hand — is it too late now to review the bidding?"

Woman's Parachuting Champion Began The Pastime 'Just For Fun'

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Debbie Schmidt figured since she was going to go to school, she might as well learn something. Other than the stuff in the books, that is.

So she signed up in the fall of 1970 for a club at Joliet Junior college, thinking it would be fun to learn how to fly.

"That was why I originally joined the club," Debbie says.

What happened is that she became a parachute addict. And what has happened to the girl from Joliet since has been as dreamy as floating on Cloud 9.

For the last two years she has been national women's parachute champion, the latest title acquired in Tahlequah, Okla., recently.

And in the meantime, she has received a degree in psychology from Southern Illinois University. Maybe, then, she could psychoanalyze a young girl from Joliet getting into parachuting.

"Because it's fun," she said in a not-so-clinical analysis. "It's a sport. Why do people get into any sport — the competition, fun, relaxation."

But the first time must be something else. The war movies always show the sergeant kicking the raw recruits out the door.

"It really wasn't that bad," she said. "Anything new is kinda scary. There's two ways to look at it. One group of people will tell you it's dangerous and you can die.

"The other group who know what they're doing have confidence in it and you have confidence in yourself. It's a very, very safe sport."

At least it's enjoyable, even if not as safe as Debbie contends. "The feeling is really hard to explain," Debbie says. "You can't compare it to anything. You're not touching anything. You don't have any sensation of falling. You have no reference point.

"But it's not like something standing still — it's like you're in a fluid."

Debbie didn't win either of the two events at the nationals — the accuracy and the style. But she was first over-all.

"Girls have a harder time because the wind affects them more," said the 5-foot-5, 120 pound enthusiast.

Which brings up the logical, tiring women's lib question. "No, that's not the reason I do it at all," she said.

"Women's lib is supposed to bring women out into the so-called real world. But personally I haven't had time to think about it."

Then she adds, "But I do agree with women's lib."

She certainly is liberated. Next year she'll lead the U.S. team in the world championships in Rome.

She travels to competition all over the States and plans on "taking a month off to practice in North Carolina."

Oh, and about that pilot's license.

"I never did get it," she says. "Flying is kind of boring anyway — it's a way to get you up there."

Request To Deliver Refused In This Case

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who I like, but his wife can be very obnoxious.

This wife asked me to take a urine sample to the hospital lab for her in the morning because she and her husband leave for work earlier than the lab opens up and I go right by the hospital on my way to work later.

I said no flat out. The next morning, this woman's mother was there to pick up the little jar to deliver it to the hospital, which is only six blocks away.

IT'S URINE, NOT MINE
DEAR IT'S: I think you were being unduly squeamish. You probably would have taken a blood sample and would not have been shocked by the request — unless, of course, you don't like any part of your neighbor's wife.

DEAR ABBY: Joe, a guy I bowl with, told me that he just came back from Las Vegas where he had been the best man at three weddings. (I'll call the bridegroom "Paul.")

Joe said that Paul first married a girl who was visibly pregnant just to give her baby a name. Immediately after they were married, Paul divorced her.

Then Paul went back to the chapel and married Girl No. 2 for the same reason. As soon as they were married, Paul divorced her, too.

Paul said the divorces had been set up in advance. Then, they went back to the chapel, and Paul married the girl he was really in love with. (Joe said the third one didn't look pregnant.)

How about blood tests and waiting periods? Personally, I think this so-called "best man" is full of baloney, but he swears this actually happened.

Is this possible?

DOUBTING THOMAS
DEAR TOM: It's possible. Blood tests and waiting periods are not required in Nevada. I am informed that divorces are final when granted and the parties are free to marry immediately.

DEAR ABBY: The nursing problems of 1880 caught my eye because I was a graduate nurse in 1908.

In training we received $8 per month for four years. We worked 10 hours a day, six days a week, and did all the cleaning. Three months every year, we worked in the TB ward.

Later, on private cases, we were allowed to charge only $25 a week. On contagious cases, we cooked all the patient's meals in the family kitchen, but many times, all I got to eat was one bowl of milk and bread.

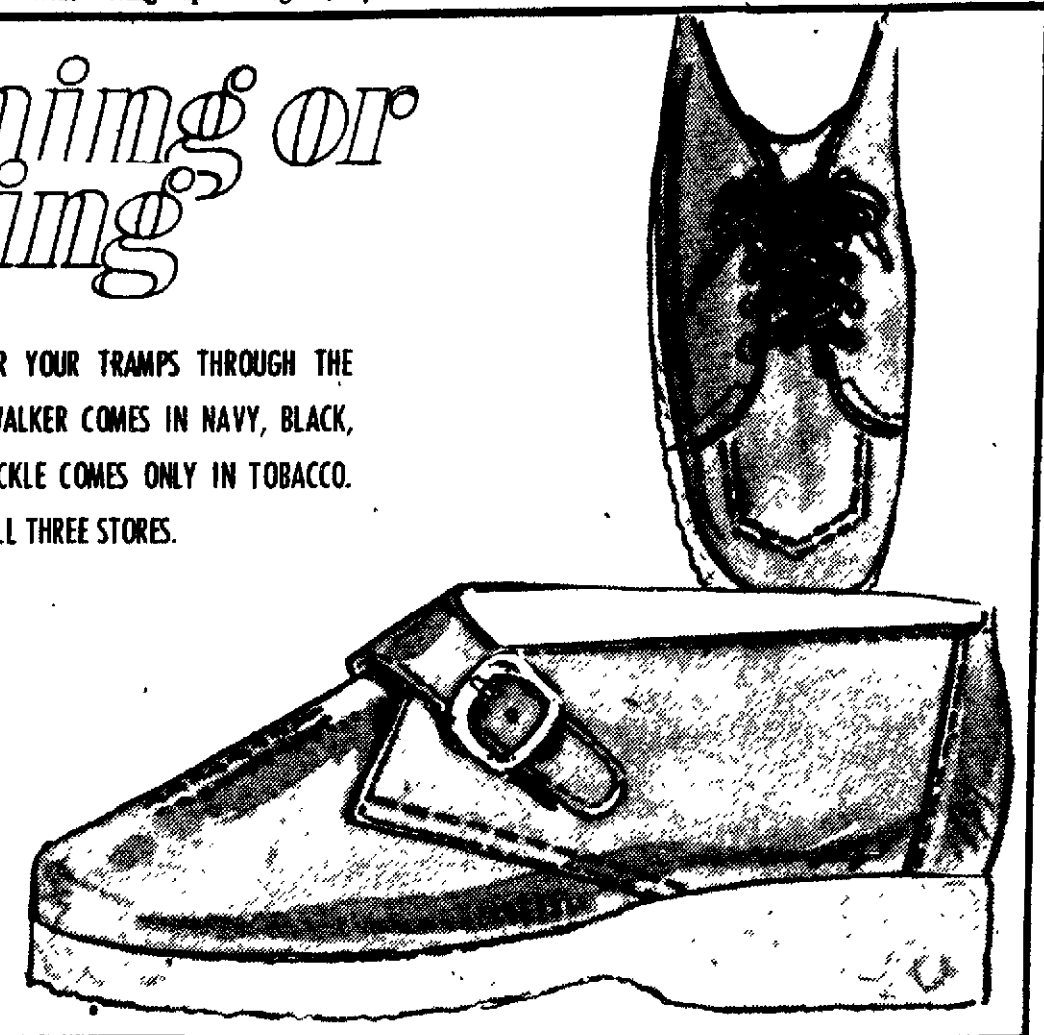

On private cases we worked 20 hours a day and usually left the case after three weeks feeling exhausted and very hungry.

Today, nursing is a ball.

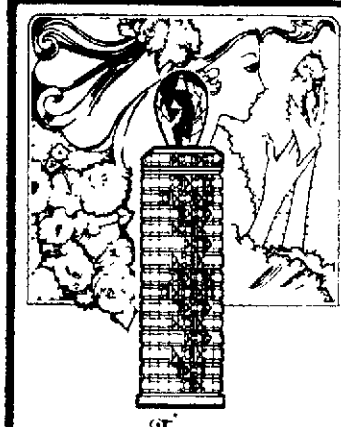

NORA J.

DEAR NORA: The low pay, long hours and drudgery of nursing in the early 1900s may make today's nursing look easy. But the academic and professional requirements for an R.N. these days are no "ball." And the competition, tensions and living costs that face the modern nurse don't make her work or her life a "ball," either.

Scattered Offices To Find Home

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

A number of city agencies housed in scattered offices around the city will finally find a home to call their own — the Old Federal Building.

The City Council agreed Tuesday to relocate a number of offices into the first and second floors of the building, which is located between 9th and 10th on P St.

Offices to be housed in expanded space on the first floor are Intake and Referral, now in the Old City Hall, and the city planning department, which has to move out of the County-City building to make room for expanded data processing operations.

Offices to be housed on the second floor include the Municipal Court Probation Department, now at the Old City Hall; the Community Development Department, now in various locations, and the Human Rights Office, now at 16th and M. Offices for CETA employees and possibly the Credit Union also will be provided.

Total cost to relocate those offices and to hire custodial and elevator help, obtain building insurance and remodeling totals $67,651. However, the council already has some $51,576 budgeted to take care of rental and other utility costs.

As a result the City Council, on the recommendation of the mayor, budgeted $16,000 more for the relocation.

Real Estate Manager Dennis Fetting, who prepared the relocation plan, said building inspectors spotted several fire safety and electrical problems.

Fetting said he believed there would be no interim problem since the city only would be using the first two floors, not the third and fourth, and because the city offices would be using substantially less electricity than the former occupants.

Fetting said he didn't know if the city would have to do any major repairs in the building, since, he said, "We don't know how well this building is glued together until we get into it."

Relocation of the offices to the Old Federal Building is only an interim solution, Mayor Helen Boosalis said. Plans call for the eventual construction of a performing arts center on the first two floors by the University of Nebraska. City offices would then be placed on the upper floors.

The Lincoln Foundation has indicated it will buy the Old Federal Building and lease space back to the city.

Fetting also reported that employee and public parking can be provided around the building.

Council Cuts Coordinator Pay Fund

Once upon a time the city officials agreed on how they'd set up the Community Development Department. Then on Monday, they couldn't agree on what they had previously agreed to.

And on Tuesday, still not agreeing on what they had agreed to, the City Council compromised on one area of disagreement.

Three councilmen wanted to eliminate the position of an economic coordinator, which would head up the economic division under the new department. Mayor Helen Boosalis doesn't want to cut out that $20,000 job.

Three other council members agreed with the mayor.

When it came time for that magic vote to cut or keep the economic coordinator, the council, split 3-3. Councilmen Steve Cook, Bob Sikyta and Max Denney voted to axe the job, while Bob Jeambey, Sue Bailey and John Robinson voted to keep it in. Dick Baker was absent.

Jeambey then proposed the council compromise and cut the salary account in half, and leave the option open for hiring the coordinator six months from now. Or, he suggested, the council and mayor could use that money to hire a new department director for $35,000, instead of $25,000.

Mrs. Boosalis agreed to that compromise, vowing to keep the council informed of any plans to hire an economic coordinator.

Still to be resolved by the council is whether the new department should supervise transportation services, or whether a separate department of transportation should be formed. Further discussion on that issue is expected.

Cook said he wants to be extra cautious in restructuring the department and adding new staff because, "We made a mistake in the first place in forming Community Development. I think everybody admits that now."

Jeambey said he was concerned that if the council paid $35,000 to obtain a director with all the qualifications wanted by the council, the department would end up emphasizing downtown redevelopment at the expense of neighborhood development.

Housing Budget

In additional budgetary decisions the council approved the housing administrator's $109,071 budget without a proposed cut in salaries. Sikyta thinks the division is overstaffed.

The council also cut $25,000 out of the Lincoln Police Department's $3.4 million salary account and another 5%, or $42,966, out of the department's operation and maintenance account.

Sikyta said he thought the department's administrators could make the cuts without effecting efficiency. As with other city departments, the council is encouraging the department heads not to fill positions as people resign or retire. Job cuts could come out of the department's civilian core, instead, Sikyta said.

The council also cut 5%, or $8,460, out of the Lincoln Fire Department's operations budget. The lawmakers cut another 10%, or $2,282, out of capital outlay.

Further Cuts

The council also made further reductions in some budgetary requests made by various social agencies.

The council cut $12,000 from the Lincoln Action Program's request for $75,492, cut $6,000 out of a $10,000 request from the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council, and cut $2,000 from the Peoples' City Mission's $35,000 request.

The council cut $10,000 from Community Awareness' proposed $21,000 budget, cut $1,000 out of Bob Clark's Human Services Department and cut $20,000 out of the proposed $75,000 appropriation to the Chemical Dependency Unit at Lincoln General Hospital.

The council also cut $50,000 out of its fund to open a detoxification center. The lawmakers figure it will take six months before such a center can be opened, so they cut the budget in half.

Some $49,000 from the amount of money cut from those agencies will be placed in a special fund to finance other human service programs throughout next year.

28 Lots Overlap Road County Never Vacated

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

A cloud hangs over 28 lots in two platted subdivisions, lots which each include a portion of a county road that has never been vacated, according to County Engineer Marv Nuernberger.

And unless the roadway problem is solved the title of the 28 lots will always be clouded, Nuernberger, County Register of Deeds Ken Ferguson and the city and county attorney's office all agree.

But merely settling the title question is not the only problem. The new county engineer feels the unimproved county road, 33rd St. should not be vacated at all. He believes it could be an integral part of the county's future transportation system.

Overlap 33rd

The two subdivisions, Tierra Addition and Briarhurst West 2nd addition, lie between Highway 2 and Old Cheney road, and a portion of both subdivisions overlap the unimproved but dedicated 33rd St.

Tierra Addition, which has 15 platted lots that contain dedicated county roadway, was accepted by the City Council in late February 1974, apparently before anyone discovered that the dedicated county road even existed.

Correspondence on the county road did not begin until March 1974, when the city attorney's office, using an 1879 statute, ruled that the unimproved road was actually vacated since it was not used between 1879 and 1913 or '14 when the statute was taken off the books.

But that simple solution didn't set with the county attorney. And in April 1974, the county attorney's office wrote that the records of the registrar of deeds and the county engineer should not be changed.

And changed they weren't. Both offices still show that section line road as owned by the county.

Before the vacation problem was settled, the Planning Commission and then the City Council accepted another platted subdivision in the same area. Approved by the council in January 1975, Briarhurst West 2nd Addition includes an additional 15 lots on the disputed county roadway.

Not Settled Yet

The problem is still not settled, but the two governments are at least getting closer together on their opinions.

The city attorney's office is apparently reversing its earlier decision using the old statute as a means to vacate the road.

After further studying the 1879 law, Chief Deputy William Austin said Tuesday that the statute does not apply to S 33rd, and that some government must go through the normal channels to vacate the roadway.

Since the controversy started, the land has been annexed by the city and both the city and county attorneys' offices agree that any vacation action should probably come through the City Council.

Nuernberger doesn't agree. He feels that the County Board must also take a stand on vacation. But whichever government finally decides to go through with the vacation proceedings, Nuernberger said he may speak at the required public hearing and give his reasons why the roadway should remain dedicated and even be improved as an important arterial in the county's transportation network.

The roadway problem has yet to affect any small landowners. None of the platted lots have been sold, according to register of deeds records. The lots are currently owned by the developers, Tierra Associates and Briar West, Inc.

But unless the vacation issue is settled, there will always be a cloud on the title of any of the affected lots. And this could create problems in reselling the land or in individual financing. Register of Deeds Ferguson pointed out.

Police Motorcycles Said Violating City Noise Laws

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

The next time the Lincoln Police Department purchases motorcycles, the Lincoln-Lancaster Board of Health hopes noise levels will get as much attention as engine power.

A preliminary report made to the board Tuesday night indicates that some police motorcycles are violating the city's noise limitations. It also showed that motorcycle officers are experiencing noise levels higher than what the federal government has declared harmful.

Dick McElvain, a City-County Health Department noise specialist, said the study was made on June 24 with four policemen riding 1974 Harley-Davidson motorcycles.

According to McElvain, the city noise ordinance says motorcycles averaging 35 miles an hour or less may not exceed 81 decibels. A decibel is a measure of noise. A whisper would register about 10 decibels, the noise of a nearby jet about 150 decibels.

The study showed that police motorcycles traveling at a constant speed of 15 m.p.h. measured 71 decibels, while those going at a constant speed of 30 m.p.h. registered 78 decibels.

However, McElvain said, a motorcycle accelerating from a speed of 25 m.p.h. registered 88 decibels while one accelerating from a stop measured 87 decibels.

The city ordinance exempts police and fire vehicles on authorized emergency missions.

but, McElvain said, the measurements he took represent "situations they encounter every day."

McElvain said the Health Department is contacting motorcycle manufacturers to determine which makes the quietest product. The information will be passed on to acting Chief Dale Adams, he said, "and hopefully he will use this information when purchasing new motorcycles."

In another test, a noise dosimeter (device for measuring noise over extended periods) was placed on a motorcycle policeman's collar to measure the noise he encounters in a normal eight-hour day.

In four such tests, McElvain said, the noise measured exceeded the maximum of 90 decibels recommended by the Office of Safety and Health Administration.

The study showed that the motorcycle officer encountered 95 decibels at 25 and 35 m.p.h. and more than 100 decibels when traveling 25 m.p.h. with police radios on.

The noise study is part of a community noise abatement program being conducted by the Health Department. A survey of Lincoln Municipal Airport noise levels and more work on local car race noise pollution are scheduled.

In other action, the board delayed until next month's meeting a decision on a new department mileage plan.

Departments Face 'Hold-The-Line' Policy

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The topics and the testimony showed few surprises.

The largest budgets with the biggest cuts took the most time during the Tuesday night public hearing on Lancaster County's budgets.

For more than three hours the three county commissioners listened to arguments against cuts proposed for the engineer's and sheriff's budgets. And several other agencies sandwiched a few proposals of their own between the two major contenders for budget reinstatement.

The current "hold the line" position will continue next year, Chairman Jan Gauger warned the departments, specifically the sheriff and engineer.

The current $22.7 million budget means a 12.04 mill levy, and this leaves some room for growth next year, Mrs. Gauger pointed out in her opening remarks.

The sheriff's budget is 26% higher than actual expenditures last year and 65% higher than what was budgeted two years ago, she said.

"Time and weather will be a more formidable obstacle" than the board's $428,000 cut from the county engineer's bridge and road fund, Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said.

Engineer Marv Nuernberger, who has been debating a host of issues with the board, sometimes heatedly, apparently heeded Hamilton's opening comment that "I personally prefer calm, reasoned arguments over strident rhetoric."

For 45 minutes Nuernberger carefully explained his current program to upgrade county roads and get as much federal funding as possible into the county.

"This is the most important assignment I will have in my term of office," Nuernberger said about the current budget request. Nuernberger is seeking the same mill levy support, about 3 mills, that his office received last year. The entire road and bridge program and the anticipation of federal funding is built on a 3 mill basis, Nuernberger told the board.

"We just cannot develop any kind of highway program without a steady flow of local money," Nuernberger emphasized.

The board did not dispute Nuernberger's ability as county engineer nor his expertise in federal and state funding. What Commissioners Gauger and Hamilton questioned is the priority of spending almost one-third of the county mill levy on roads, and the need for as much local support. If, in fact, many projects will receive some federal funding, then can't local moneys be cut some, they asked Nuernberger.

About a dozen supporters, including representatives from the Waverly School District, the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, the State Roads Department and private citizens, lobbied for maintenance of the 3 mill levy.

The sheriff's more than $983,000 proposed budget received a $130,151 cut from commissioners and department personnel and supporters turned out for the hearing.

"Lancaster County has the dubious distinction of being a high crime area," said Lt. Paul Spahn, as he urged the board to reinstate the money for two additional deputies, one receptionist and nine cars.

While complaints increased by 31% during the first six months and the county has seen a 22% increase in the serious crimes, the department clearance rate has dropped to 18%.

"One out of five serious crimes is cleared," Spahn pointed out, blaming the clearance rate on lack of staff. Commissioner Robert Colin continued his support of the engineer and sheriff and his questioning of social service funding during the public hearing.

Vocational Rehabilitation was among several agencies requesting revenue sharing help.

Vocational Rehabilitation is seeking almost $37,000 for handicapped and disabled programs and for the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs.

Legal Aid Society put in a request for $16,000 in additional county funds, the same amount cut from the city budgets this week. The county has already proposed to finance $31,325 of the legal aid budget.

China Firm Develops Ceramic Bone Implants

(EDITOR'S NOTE: How to make artificial bones and limbs that work well and wear well long has been a medical challenge. Peter Hoffmann is based in the Bonn bureau of McGraw-Hill World News.)

By PETER HOFFMANN
Bonn — Rosenthal, a household name for fine china, is about to offer a ceramic material to replace diseased human bones.

Rosenthal Technik, a subsidiary which has been making ceramic material for industrial uses for many years, is in the process of perfecting bone replacement components that promise improved long-term usefulness and fewer medical complications.

German specialists estimate 300,000 patients around the world have been fitted with new artificial "bones" embedded in tissue that duplicated skeletal functions. Most patients either suffer hereditary deformities or acquire them because of insufficient exercise and excessively sedentary occupations, says Dr. Karsten Seidel. Seidel is an orthopedic surgeon at the University of Erlangen Clinic and as a consultant to Rosenthal Technik he helped develop the new technology.

Bone implants made of special steels or high-molecular polyethylene, a tough plastic, were regarded until now as tops in bone implant technology according to Dr. Seidel. However, these implants can become troublesome with time, usually after five years. Because of different degrees of elasticity implants don't "take" to the bone tissue, says Dr. Seidel.

In its new system, which will be introduced on a limited basis this fall, Rosenthal is using a new material and a new implantation technique to overcome some of these problems. The material is very pure, heat-treated aluminum oxide which is chemically inert, has very high strength, and is biochemically compatible.

Additionally, Rosenthal developed a cement-free implantation technique in which the bone is precision-milled into a conical shape which is then simply propped onto a ceramic "sleeve" that provides a link to the artificial bone stem and ball. The connection is so stable that only a screw is needed to prevent the bone and sleeve from rotating around each other during the early post-operation period. Later, bone and sleeve form a tight bond.

Initially Rosenthal will make available a three-component kit to replace the upper arm. The kit will come in different sizes to allow the surgeon to select the right combination during the operation. Other components are under development, and, says a Rosenthal Technik spokesman, "theoretically it is conceivable to replace other parts of the skeleton, maybe even knee joints," with the material.

Drivers License Revocations Up

The State Department of Motor Vehicles reports the number of Nebraskans losing their drivers licenses under the 12-point revocation system increased last month over June.

The department said there were 190 revocations during July, 179 in June and 146 in July of last year.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplante

San Francisco — "I reckon we'll have to sell the cow," said the Widow Brown. "The squire wants his money."

I grew up on Horatio Alger, Jr. "Rags To Riches." The near sighted banker gives the ragged newsboy a five dollar gold piece instead of a penny.

Does Dick the newsboy powder home and tell his mama, "Pack! We're headed for Rio?" Not ruddy likely, mate. He pursues the banker into his bank.

"You gave me this by mistake, sir."

The banker is overcome by such honesty. (You don't find too much honesty in dampers.) He makes the kid a vice president. If a depositor slips him a five gold piece by mistake, he does not pursue said depositor.

He takes it in and gives it to the banker. He has learned a lesson and is on his way up.

"Can I have a dollar?" said the female child. I said: "What did you do with the buck I gave you yesterday?"

She said: "I spent it." Money went a lot farther when I was waiting for a banker to slip me a golden fin by mistake. I had no intention of returning it. I was saving up for a bear trap.

Bear traps were advertised in a boy's magazine I subscribed to. "Make Big Money Trapping Animals!"

Endangered species had not become endangered in those wonderful days. Certainly they were in no danger from us. We saved for bear traps. But on Saturday our ambitions weakened.

I said: "I'll just take out 10 cents for the movie."

Thus we wound up in the popcorn rows.

"Draw, Stranger! Or mosey!"

Rags to riches. We had an eye on the bluebird and ambitions to become millionaires. Life was that simple.

Few boys want to be millionaires nowadays. Whyiddle away good time making money when you can stem a buck off the Old Man?

We opened lemonade stands. We dug dandelions out of lawns. We got a nickel a dozen. The first million dollars was a long way down the tunnel.

Bear traps looked like top money. Alas, I never saved up enough to get a trap for muskrats.

How come that sniveling little Dick the Newsboy got all the gravy?

My youngest boy got himself a paper route. Right away I could see that Lady Luck might have passed up my generation, but she was gaffing the roulette wheel for the up and coming. I said: "If anybody pays you off in gold pieces, bring it home so I can see if it's real."

Sad to say, most of his customers paid off by check.

I wrote a piece about my son and his paper route. At once I got a helpful note from an old lag about his paper route.

He said: "Don't let your boy collect on sunny days. Make him collect on rainy nights. He should wear a sweater with a hole in it. Have him put on shoes with his toes sticking through."

He said: "People will not only pay the bill. They'll give him a handsome tip."

His return address was a postoffice number at a well known moan-and-wail.

Rise Reported In Retail Sales

Washington (AP) — The government reported that the volume of sales by retailers showed its biggest monthly jump in a year during July.

The Commerce Department said July's sales were up by 2.4% to a total of $49.97 billion. That was the largest jump since a 4% advance in July 1974.

Lincoln Star ACTION LINE
Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

What's the story on the street construction on east Cornhusker Highway? There's about a 26-block stretch that's torn up and is causing some real traffic problems.

—J.L., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Inspector Dean Leitner of the Lincoln Police Dept. says Cornhusker will be torn up for another three to five weeks. However, he says two traffic officers have been specially assigned to handle congestion during the construction. He says when people start taking some alternate routes to work these assignments will be reduced to just during the peak traffic periods rather than all day.

I'm interested in growing some mushrooms, but have been unable to find the proper materials such as sterile soil. Can ACTION LINE give me some help on this?

—Curious, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Lancaster County Extension Agent Emery Nelson says you can make sterile soil yourself by baking it in an oven. He also notes that ethyl bromide or vapors are two chemicals that will sterilize soil. However, in using the chemicals he cautions that they are very poisonous. Nelson says soil can be sterilized with a process similar to pasteurizing by heating it to approximately 200 degrees. He also notes his office has a circular with information on mushrooms and says people are welcome to come and read it.

I understand that the Lincoln-Lancaster Health Dept. rates restaurants during its inspection process. Is it possible for a person to obtain a list of those ratings?

—Wondering, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Yes it is possible. Mike Hammer, with the department's food sanitation section, says the department's policy on releasing the list has been recently changed. He says a booklet is now available at the Health Department with a list of how the restaurants and drinking establishments have been rated. Hammer says the booklet also contains an explanation of how the ratings are done and some hints as to how the consumer himself can judge the level of sanitation.

A recent newspaper article concerning the off-sale liquor license proposal at Branched Oak Lake mentioned a small portion of land that is federally owned and the water surface is federal where drinking would be legal. Where is the portion of the shore line that's federal?

—Concerned, Weston

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the State Game and Parks Commission says the water itself and the fenced-in area at the dam are federally owned. He says this is the case at all the Salt Valley Watershed Lakes. He notes that a very minuscule portion of the shoreline in addition to the fenced-in area is also federal, but he cautions it would be extremely difficult to determine just where this is.

I worked for someone for 11 hours a week for a month. This person didn't pay me for the work I did and I would like to know what I can do about this?

—P.P., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: If you made an agreement with this person to work for a certain compensation, the best course of action would be to take your case to the Small Claims Court. This agency is located in the County-City Building.

Campbell Notes Inequities In State's School Districts

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

State Education Commissioner Anne Campbell declared support Tuesday for reorganizing Nebraska's 1,241 school districts, because "equity does not exist" among all student opportunities paid by varying property tax rates.

At the annual Commissioner's Day, hosting about 200 Nebraska educators in Lincoln, Dr. Campbell pledged the State Education Department in the coming year will focus on making career education workable, developing pre-school programs, and promoting community education for all ages.

"We generally react rather than initiate," she said in a wide-ranging address. She thus urged formation of a "blue-ribbon study committee" to recommend legislation that would coordinate all Nebraska post-high school education, including private, parochial and profit-making schools.

And in an indirect reference to the Legislature, she said Nebraska "must realistically address the added costs for services," such as special education required by LB403.

Unprecedented Proposal

To streamline the problem-ridden law, she made the unprecedented proposal that superintendents submit 1976-77 plans and estimated budgets to serve handicapped children by January 1977. Ahead of the legislative debate on fiscal 1977 appropriations, that would reverse the usual process.

A total of 25,875 handicapped children were served under LB403 in the past school year, she said. Those 7% of all Nebraska students needing special programs will increase to an estimated 10% by mid-1978.

"We must address" the present number of school districts, which Dr. Campbell said "makes administration extremely difficult" for programs such as LB403. (Nebraska has 10% of all districts in the nation, and more than any other state.)

"There is little argument that equity does not exist in the resources available to support an educational program for every child in Nebraska," she said.

"There is less argument that every taxpaying citizen of Nebraska pays an equal share toward the support of public education. But how that support is to be equalized generates a great deal of disagreement."

Voters Rejected

Voters last November rejected a referendum measure on a law that would have revamped public financing of schools, shifting reliance for state aid money from the property tax to bigger shares from sales and income taxes.

But public debate shifted from the effect the historic state aid measure would have had on students' educational opportunities, focusing instead on tax aspects.

Superior Hotel Auctioned Off For $3,000

Superior (AP) — The Union Hotel, a landmark here for 95 years, was sold at a bargain basement price at a public auction Monday.

The new owner is Rick Alexander, a senior at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He purchased the historic, two-story brick building for $3,000.

Alexander said he intends to keep the hotel open for business for the time being.

Former owner Maurice Kilgore claims the Union Hotel was the first hotel west of the Mississippi River to offer travelers lavatories in their own rooms.

During its peak years, railroads rented most of the hotel's 28 rooms for 75¢ a night.

The depression hit hard, and the hotel stood vacant for many years before bouncing back towards the end of World War II.

Drowning Said Cause Of Death

Omaha (AP) — Drowning was listed as the cause of death of a 46-year-old Omaha woman found dead in her home Sunday, Deputy County Atty. Henry Wendt said Tuesday.

Delores K. Meeks' body was found in the bathtub of her home.

Wendt said he hasn't determined what caused the woman to drown.

"Personally," Dr. Campbell said, "I am willing to support a state aid incentive plan with local determination of boundaries for organization."

"I believe the people of this state recognize the inequities that exist and are willing to support a reasonable plan."

She noted that State Sens. Frank Lewis and Cal Carsten, chairmen of the Legislature's Education and Revenue Committees, will hold a series of statewide meetings on the issues in October.

Education institutions "are being criticized for what they are and aren't doing, with more responsibility being thrust upon them to meet the needs of all youth," Dr. Campbell said.

"In the meantime, these added functions are to be met with less cost and higher achievement." Success "Martyrs"

Despite some shortcomings, the public schools have served well "and are more the martyrs of success than the victims of failure," she said.

To balance reliance on the legislative arena for action, schools are equally challenged. Dr. Campbell said. But she warned against jumping over problems and into solutions before setting goals.

In career education, Nebraska must fashion more direct ways to help "individuals prepare for total life careers, as opposed to preparing them for specific occupations only, or for further education only," she said.

In early childhood education, Dr. Campbell said, local communities must identify their needs, supported by professional studies and evaluations of existing pilot programs. Those can be adapted to meet what each school then decides is its role.

Community education, piloted in Alliance and York, is an "encompassing concept" which ultimately will affect children, Dr. Campbell said.

"The test of our success will be the ability to work with all segments of the community" and agencies as schools become centers of improved human relations and values.

Dr. Campbell said she believes in the need for Educational Service Units, which provide some school districts with special education and other services. But the ESU role and function need "a clearer definition" to be more responsive with the State Education Department.

Commenting on President Ford's veto of the omnibus Education Appropriations Bill, she said, "Nebraska has a great deal at stake."

Bellevue, Omaha and Papillion will lose an estimated $3 million, and other districts will lose smaller amounts in aid to federally affected areas. The loss to Nebraska vocational education programs statewide is almost $14 million, and another $5 million to bilingual programs.

She urged educators to persuade the Nebraska congressional delegation that the 3.6% increase in the vetoed funding bill isn't inflationary.

Union Workers Return To Work On Fieldhouse

By The Associated Press

Pickets have been removed and most union members have resumed work at the construction site of the University of Nebraska fieldhouse here, a spokesman says.

Forrest Doling, who supervises the union members on the site under Cook Construction Co., said Tuesday the university had erected a fence to designate separate work sites for union and non-union members.

Union members had walked off the site for the third time this summer, testing the presence of a nonunion contractor, T&M Construction Co., on the same site.

Doling said ironworkers have not returned to work on the site and many union workers have left the fieldhouse site to work on other jobs where the situation is more stable.

Signatures Support Drive For State Day Care Funds

By The Associated Press

A group has obtained more than 4,000 signatures on petitions in an attempt to convince the state that more money should be made available for child day care.

Carrie Anderson, a member of the steering committee leading the group, said 78% of the parents whose 5,000 children are now in state supported day care programs would become ineligible if new Department of Welfare guidelines are allowed to go into effect. The new guidelines set a maximum gross income for eligibility for a family of four at $490 per month.

Mrs. Anderson said the level should be put at $590.

Coaches Clinic Keeps 'Retired' Galloway Busy

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Retirement? "You must be kidding," says retired Lincoln Northeast athletic director Bun Galloway. "I've really been hitting the ball the last three weeks."

Galloway is secretary-treasurer of the Nebraska Coaches Assn., bracing for an expected invasion of 1,000 coaches for the annual summer clinics Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at Pershing Auditorium.

"Things are sure different nowadays," Galloway says with a laugh. "I was cleaning out my desk earlier this summer and ran across a picture when I was secretary-treasurer of the coaches association in 1950."

"That's when the university and the NSAA (Nebraska School Activities Assn.) sponsored the summer clinics," recalls Galloway. "The coaches didn't spend a dime."

"They took a picture of everyone attending the clinic in the stadium," Galloway remembers. "I suppose there were about a hundred in the picture."

Pre-Registered 625

By Monday, Galloway had pre-registered about 625 coaches for this week's clinics. "That's the most we've ever had," he acknowledges. "Usually, it's about half that. We're expecting between 900 and 1,000 coaches. Last year we drew 850 and that was a record."

Galloway credits first-year clinic director Gene Kruger of Elkhorn for the enthusiastic response. "This is the best overall clinic lineup we've ever had," he says.

Main attractions are North Carolina State football coach Lou Holtz on Wednesday and Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight on Thursday.

Timmons, Dowler Slated

Other principal speakers include Wyoming wrestling coach Joe Dowler, Kansas track coach Bob Timmons, volleyball expert Bruce Wilde of Fort Dodge, Ia.,

Nebraska defensive football coordinator Monte Kiffin, Kansas City Community College basketball coach Walt Shubert, Lincoln East football coach Lee Zentic, former John F. Kennedy College women's basketball coach George Nicodemus, Bellevue football coach Bill James, South Dakota State assistant football and track coach Wayne Haensel and former LSU basketball standout Joe Dean.

Galloway claims "I've dug out all the old, made room for the new regime and have tried to keep up and process back through by the next day."

Clinic Schedule

Restrictions Lifted For Local Schools

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Tantamount to giving final approval, the Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday night made no objections to proposed changes in the public schools interscholastic athletic regulations.

Supt. John Prash said he'll recommend making the rules more flexible, for action by the Athletic Policy Committee of high school athletic directors and principals.

The committee normally sets athletic rules without board consent, but Prash involved board members in the deliberations to answer parents' concerns and because new policies may have an effect on future rules for non-athletic interscholastic activities.

Prash said he'll "move ahead" and recommend:

— Making swimming pools available for a second daily practice session in the mornings before schools open, with lifeguards on duty. Swimmers won't be required to report early, nor must coaches be present.
— Lifting the limit on the number of varsity football players that may suit up for Lincoln games.

— Removing the restriction on Christmas holiday athletic tournaments for all sports, most likely basketball and wrestling. That would also allow more games to be added to the regular schedule, a restriction which had also drawn complaints.

Prash recommended, and the board tacitly agreed, that the five-day moratorium on practice sessions during the Christmas break should remain in force. He reasoned that will allow parents to celebrate the holiday out of town with their children, who shouldn't be required to practice then.

However, school athletic facilities will remain open for use during the Christmas season, on an optional basis, Prash said.

The four high school principals all agreed to the changes, he said, and Board President Lou Roper echoed that they're "excellent." They'll make Lincoln Public School interscholastic athletic policies comparable to those in almost all other Nebraska school districts.

John Walker of New Zealand breaks the tape at the conclusion of his world record mile run in the time of 3 minutes, 49.4 seconds, in Götterburg, Sweden Tuesday.

Walker Smashes World Mile Mark

GÖTTERBURG, Sweden (UPI) — John Walker of New Zealand clocked 3 minutes, 49.4 seconds Tuesday to break Filbert Bayi's 13-week old world one-mile record, displaying the kind of form which Marty Liquori said would win him, and not the little Tanzanian, the Olympic 1,500 meter title next year.

Walker carved 1.6 seconds off the mark Bayi set May 18 at Kingston, Jamaica, when the Tanzanian broke Jim Ryan's eight-year old record by one-tenth of second with a 3:51.0 clocking. Walker finished second in that race with Liquori third.

Liquori, after suffering a series of defeats by Walker in Europe, has since moved up to the 5,000 meters for his Olympic challenge in Montreal next year.

There was no holding Walker Tuesday night.

Spurred on by the cheers of a 9,000 crowd, and running in ideal weather and track conditions, Walker passed 1,500 meters in 3:34.3 (Bayi's world record is 3:33.2) and finished 50 yards clear of a couple of Australians, Ken Hall and Graham Crouch.

Hall clocked 3:55.2 for second place with Crouch third in 3:56.4. Gunnar Ekman of Sweden was fourth in 4:01.5.

with Canada's Paul Craig fifth in 4:02.0.

Sweden's Goaran Zenermark, who finished well back, took the field through the half mile in 1:55.5, then Walker went to the front and ran alone, producing a last lap of 55.9 seconds after covering the first three in 56.3, 59.2 and 58.0.

Walker said the fast early pace set by Zenermark helped him to the record. "I knew I could do it," he said, confirming the predictions of the experts who have waited all summer for him to really attack Bayi's mark.

The jubilant New Zealander indicated he might be able to reduce the record even further. "I still have four more big races in Europe this season. Who knows what can happen?"

With the crowd chanting, "Walker...Walker..." the burly Kiwi waved to the fans and said:

"This is the night I will always remember."

Responding to the cheers of 9,000 fans shouting: "Walker, Walker, Walker," the New Zealander said his record-breaking effort was due to good "drag help" by the other runners in the field and excellent crowd support.

Walker explained that "drag help" was the fast pace set in the beginning by him and the other runners.

"I knew I could do it," Walker said.

The New Zealander has run second to Bayi in a number of races, but Tuesday night he said: "I did not need Bayi's help any more to set the pace."

"Of course I am very happy," he said, but added "I still have four more international meets to go in Europe this season and who knows what can happen."

'NCAA Should Approve Rule Changes' Halleck

Chicago (UPI) — Wiles Halleck, Commissioner of the Pacific Eight Conference, predicted Tuesday that this week's NCAA special convention would approve rules changes which could cut the cost of operation of college athletic programs roughly 20 per cent.

Halleck said he believed the largest financial cuts would be in limits on grants-in-aid to non-revenue sports and probable elimination of the $15-a-month payment for incidental expenses to all athletes on full tenders.

He speculated also there would be a reduction in the number of grants permitted in both football and basketball.

Two proposals concern reduction of grants to athletes in non-revenue sports, one of them backed by the NCAA Council cutting the permissible total 40 per cent and another by the Southwest conference which would make a 35 per cent cut.

Neither, however, would cut the number of grants allowed in football and basketball.

Separate legislative proposals would reduce the number of grants allowed in football from 105 to 90 and one to as low as 65 while another would permit reduction of basketball grants from 30 to 27.

Halleck said he expected most of the convention fireworks on two proposals from Stephen Horn, President of Long Beach State University, to require distribution of receipts from the NCAA basketball tournament and the NCAA sponsored television program of regular season football.

"I don't believe a majority of the Division II and III schools favor the redistribution of revenues," he said. "It would seriously jeopardize the current status of the NCAA."

There has been speculation that should the proposals be approved, the Division I schools which furnish most of the competition on the football TV shows would drop out of the NCAA and package their own program for television.

Halleck said the proponents of the redistribution amendments would be cutting off the NCAA financial base in the action, pointing out that the NCAA gets 50 per cent of the revenue from its basketball tournament and 6 per cent of the regular season TV football rights payments.

Earlier in the afternoon, Houston businessman Joseph P. Conte told the NCAA he would finance and organize a national championship between the top two college football teams.

Conte said he will guarantee at least $500,000 to each of the two participating teams and $200,000 to the NCAA should it approve his plan. He estimated gross receipts from the game of about $5 million.

Horses Fail To Help Aunt Priscilla

If I wasn't so greedy, I would have made a small profit playing ponies at Tuesday's Lincoln races.

I bet Dak and Kandy Nu to win and the sweet darlings ran third as two nasty ponies beat both of them. Oh well, a famous handicapper once told me you can't live in the past.

That $4 loss dropped my $104 spree fund to $90.60, which really isn't so bad after playing ponies for more than four weeks.

I guess I'm still pretty close to even.

Aunt Priscilla
Loses $4

On Wednesday, I'm going to put my $2 win tickets (I'm still going to bet my darlings to win) on Prairie Music in the third and on Michael's Charger in the fourth.

North's Tipton Eyes Anniversary

Wayne — Friday night's All-Star Basketball Game marks Pete Tipton's first anniversary.

It was August 15 last year when Tipton arrived in Nebraska and it is only appropriate that the occasion be noted by Tipton's participation in the Nebraska Coaches Association sponsored game classic.

With Tipton scoring over 30 points per game and dominating play in the backcourt, Hartington climbed to a 21-3 record, losing only to Laurel, Coleridge, and Hartington Cedar Catholic.

His appearance in the All-Star Basketball Game almost didn't happen. When his father accepted the principal's post at Hartington High School, Tipton wasn't ready to leave Pacific, Missouri, where he was a starter on a successful basketball team. And then there were all the friends he had made through the years.

"At first, I wasn't going to come," he said. "I was going to stay with the basketball coach but he moved to Pittsburg, Kansas."

Looking back at his senior year while relaxing between practice sessions at the North All-Star camp at Wayne State College, Tipton indicated that his mind had been changed. "They play pretty decent ball in northeast Nebraska. There are some good basketball teams."

tion with the 11 other North all-stars.

"You meet a lot of the guys who are good in the sport you like," he said. "The all-star camp gives you a good idea of what it will be like when you get into college." Tipton said. "Everybody is pretty good."

Although Tipton feels that there isn't much difference between the ability of any other players on the North squad, he relishes the competition. "It makes you play just that much better."

Tipton is concentrating on his timing this week. "It isn't back where it should be," Tipton said. "I'm not squaring off with the basket very well and I'm waiting too long to shoot the ball." As a result, Tipton has seen many of his soft left-handed shots fall short.

He anticipates being ready, however, when the North attempts to extend its four-game winning streak over the South at Pershing Auditorium in Lincoln.

This fall, Tipton once again is considering remaining behind while his parents move. They left in July for Oregon and won't be back for the all-star game.

He will report after the all-star game to Kearney State College where Coach Jerry Hueser is counting on Tipton for this winter's basketball season.

AAA Pair Eye Spoiler Role

By BOB MOYER

The Lincoln AAA Fast Pitch Softball League's two new entries this season, Racquet Lounge and Walker Tire, showed themselves during the season worthy of AAA ball.

Now as the state AA tournament gets underway Wednesday at Ballard Field they face a new test.

Although neither team figures as a likely winner in the tourney, both could play the role of spoilers.

Walker Tire faces an especially tough challenge in its opener Friday night when they take on highly-regarded Scottsbluff D & A Manufacturing.

"D & A is one of the best teams," acknowledges Walker manager Charley Valencia. "But I told my boys that if we played well we could knock 'em off."

Walker's strengths this year have been pitching and defense but for them to win in the tourney, they'll have to hit better.

Good Field, No Hit

"Our story this year has been good field, no hit," says Valencia. "We've had real good defense but we haven't hit the ball like we should."

With strong pitching from Mike Schapoval and Rich Fursak, Walker has been able to stay with the other AAA teams, but according to Valencia the lack of a clutch hit at the right time has cost them from being a .500 club.

"We'd get into the bottom of the seventh and have men on base and only need that hit and what happens? Pop ups," he says. "We just haven't got that hit when we needed it."

Nevertheless Valencia feels his club can do well in the tourney.

"Win or lose, as long as we play well that's the most important thing," Valencia notes, adding "I'm proud of the way the guys played this year and next season after a year's experience I think we'll scare a few people."

Ernie Young, whose Racquet Lounge team faces the winner between Citizens State Bank and Wahoo on Thursday night, says his team's goal is to win at least one game.

Poor Start Hurt

Young, who went to school in Springfield, Mo., a hotbed for softball, says his team could have been at or above .500 except for a poor 1-6 start.

"We've played some good ball and are starting to put things together," says Young. "Our goal was .500 but we started out under the gun because several of the players were counting on weren't able to play."

"Consequently we almost had to start over with a new team after the season started. We went 13 games without a set lineup," adds Young, whose club was the city AA champions last season.

Young says the biggest adjustment for his club was defensive.

"The pitching in the league really wasn't as good as I thought it might be," he said. "It's more consistent though and all the teams play much more consistently on defense."

Young feels his club is capable of beating anybody on a given night, but admits the team is still learning.

Tresnak Helped

"Dan Tresnak (the team's other hurler besides Young) is a veteran player in the league and when he joined us it really helped because he gave us some experience we needed," says Young. "We're still learning this year and probably will be next year, too."

"But if we can win at least one game in the tournament, we think we will have done all right," says Young.

Dean's and Madison will be the first of four games set for Wednesday night in the double elimination meet.

The tourney will feature four games on Thursday and Friday nights also, with a heavy Saturday and Sunday schedule. On Saturday the tourney will have four loser's bracket games at Elks Field.

The finals for the tournament are set for 7:30 p.m. on Sunday at Ballard with action starting the final day at 10 a.m.

Tourney Schedule

Wednesday — Dean Brothers v. Madison, 6 p.m.; Citizens State Bank v. Wahoo, 7:15 p.m.; Pura Hut v. Fremont Budweiser, 8:30 p.m.; Stan's Lounge v. Scribner, 9:45 p.m.
Thursday — Dick Flynn Buick v. Dean's-Madison winner, 6 p.m.; Racquet Lounge v. CSB-Wahoo winner, 7:15 p.m.; Misty Lounge v. Scottsbluff Olympic Sports, 8:30 p.m.; Valencia's v. Scottsbluff Pioneer Lounge, 9:45 p.m.
Friday — Falstaff v. Fremont Koglin Oil, 6 p.m.; Walker Tire v. Scottsbluff D & A Manufacturing, 7:15 p.m.; Stan's Scribner loser v. CSB-Wahoo loser, 8:30 p.m.; Dean's-Madison loser v. Falstaff-Koglin loser, 9:45 p.m.
Saturday — Games at Ballard Field start at 10 a.m.; games at Elks Field start at 10 a.m.
Sunday — First game, 10 a.m.; finals, 7:30 p.m.

Ketterer Gives Suspicious Racegoer Fair Shake At Tracks

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

The average racegoer, according to Jack Ketterer, is a suspicious sort.

"Most people who think racing is dishonest or think they saw something they think is dishonest just don't know what they're talking about," said the director of race track security for the Nebraska State Racing Commission. "They (patrons) just aren't educated about horse racing."

"The public is always willing to blame a loss of a bet on someone or something rather than to admit they bet on the wrong horse or just had bad luck or bad knowledge," he said.

"Part of my job is to let the public know they're getting a fair shake at the tracks," he

Lincoln Native

Ketterer, who was raised in Lincoln, has been in his present post since Aug. 1, 1973. At age 27, he is undoubtedly one of the youngest persons to hold such a position in the United States.

But youth doesn't hinder Ketterer in his attempts to protect the public. Since he has been on the job, he has twice caught riders who allegedly possessed electrical devices. Such devices are barred from all race tracks.

He also has evicted bookmakers from several tracks. Bookmakers are not allowed on any race track, but they occasionally appear.

"Anybody involved with bookmaking, we don't want on the tracks," he said. "In fact, on two or three occasions surveillance by security has led to arrests or indictments on gambling charges.

Local Cooperation

"We work in cooperation with the local officials. Just last year we had one case (of bookmaking) here in Lincoln," he noted. "I really can't remember any cases where these people resisted arrest. If they would, we would simply get the local police."

"It's really a small part of my job (evicting bookmakers). I really feel that my job is to give the public confidence in racing," he said.

By definition, Ketterer's job is to represent the State of Nebraska at each race track to make certain security is in tip-top condition.

That does not mean, however, that he is a "spy" on Murdoch

Jack Ketterer
Security Director

Platner (who runs Coordinated Securities at four of the five Nebraska tracks) or Platner's crew.

"I am not a watchdog looking over their security," Ketterer said. "In Omaha, I work closely with John Quist (of Ak-Sar-Ben's staff) and with Jack O'Mara (the Omaha representative of the Thoroughbred Racing Protection Bureau). Outstate and in Omaha, I work closely with the stewards," he said.

Cage Career?

Although Ketterer is not associated with horse racing, it appeared once as if he might have been headed toward a career with basketball.

A 1966 graduate of Lincoln Northeast, Ketterer was a three-year member of coach Ed Johnson's Rocket basketball team. His junior and senior teams qualified for the state tournament, only to lose to eventual state champion Boys Town.

He then attended Creighton University in Omaha on a basketball scholarship for four years. Perhaps the best Bluejay team was his senior crew which compiled a 16-10 overall mark in the 1969-70 season.

As captain of coach Eddie Sutton's first Creighton squad, the major Bluejay wins included a 97-88 verdict over Iowa at Iowa City when the Hawkeyes were undefeated and ranked in nation's top five and a 72-68 win over national power New Mexico State in Omaha.

Law And Racing
Then the 6-0 guard attended Arizona State and received his law degree in May of 1973. Now the question was how to combine a law degree with horse racing?

"Between my second and third year of law school, I worked as a clerk in Harry Farnham's law office (Farnham is chairman of the Nebraska State Racing Commission)," he said. "I asked him then how I could combine a law degree with racing."

"That January, he (Farnham) talked to me about the possibility of joining the Commission staff. I was hired originally to help Mort (Porter, the administrative secretary) Jack (Fickler, state steward) and Joe Thornton (then director of security)."

In less than two years, Ketterer has overcome many of the suspicious racetrack have for a security person who has not spent a lifetime on the racetrack. "It's not so much that youth makes a difference. It does take a certain amount of time to get the respect of people, however," he noted. "If you do your job, you'll get the respect of the people."

That's one area where Jack Ketterer has no worries — he's one of the most respected officials in this state.

New Schedule

There will only be two hearings rather than three at Wednesday's meeting of the Nebraska State Racing Commission.

The scheduled hearings involving pony boy Jerry Breesmes and owner-trainer Tony Veneziano have been continued until a later date.

A new case concerning owner Don Conyers and an incident at the starting gate has been scheduled in place of the two postponed hearings.

The case of tack shop operator Jerry Gitter will also be heard. The meeting, open to the public, is set for 11 a.m. in the board of directors' room of the Administration Building at the State Fairgrounds.

Westbrook On Trial Here

Former Nebraska wingback Don Westbrook will be "on trial" Saturday in NU's Memorial Stadium when the Baltimore Colts face Atlanta in a National Football League preseason football game.

Westbrook, a sixth-round draft choice of the Colts last January, unfortunately also is the sixth wide receiver behind five veterans.

Because of injuries to two of them, Freddie Scott and Glenn Doughty, Westbrook will get a lot of playing time against the Falcons and it's probably his last chance to prove he can make the team. A year ago, the Colts kept only five wide receivers.

"His chances are 50-50 of making the team," Barry Jones, Colts' publicity director said after arriving in Lincoln Tuesday. "It's going to be a tough battle for him. His problem has been his hands. His speed is what the coaches like."

Don Westbrook

Westbrook, who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.4 seconds, muffed his first opportunity to show his stuff a couple of weeks ago in a rookie game against the Washington Redskins when he dropped two passes that should have gone for touchdowns, according to Jones.

Westbrook, the Big Eight's No. 2 receiver last season with 33 catches for 508 yards and seven touchdowns, also is being used as a tackler on kickoff and punt teams.

He'll line up at No. 2 wide receiver behind Roger Carr on the left side of the line while Ollie Smith will be No. 1 on the other side with Tim Berra backing him up.

Scott has a sprained knee which has been placed in a cast and Doughty has a small crack in a bone above an eye, both suffered in Baltimore's overtime victory last Saturday night over Denver, 23-20.

Dutton, Olds Set

Two former Huskers, defensive end John Dutton and running back Bill Olds are set for starting assignments, both here and apparently for the season.

Olds played three quarters against Denver, then gave way for Roosevelt Leaks, the former Texas star who got his first chance of the season.

Dutton, 6-7 and 268, had two "sacks" of Bronco quarterbacks for 23 yards in losses and had the quarterbacks under pressure four or five other times. He played the entire game. In Colt practices this summer, Dutton has been unstoppable despite an obvious improvement in the Baltimore offensive line. He has overpowered everyone put against him in one-on-one situations.

"I know I'm stronger because I went on a weight program working only on what would help me as a football player," Dutton, all-rookie selection last season, said. "I did a lot of running from April on to keep my speed and I think I'm faster now than before."

Dutton relied on his quickness and finesse to outwit offensive linemen last year, but has been using fewer techniques this year, substituting just plain old brute force and it has been working fantastically.

Anthony's Gets Legion Title

PAPILLION, Neb. (AP)—Omaha Anthony's got a run with two out in the ninth inning to edge North Platte, 2-1, Tuesday night for the State Class A American Legion Junior Baseball Tournament title. The winning run came after Dan Bendon opened Anthony's ninth with a single and took second on an error. He was then picked off second by North Platte hurler Randy Weigel.

Lew Rempe then drew a walk, stole second and went to third on a throwing error Pitcher Paul Glogowski struck out before Mark Vavra got his only hit of the night to end the contest.

Anthony's had scored in the first on two hits and an error. The unearned run was scored by Jack Beal on a single by Don Olechowski.

North Platte's only run came in the fifth inning when Jerry Scheuler doubled and scored on a single by Bill Windhorst.

The Omaha team will move on to Cedar Rapids, Iowa next week for the regional tournament. Anthony's has a season mark of 22-9.

North Platte bowed out 18-13.

A Sports Roundup

FOOTBALL

Former NU standout Marvin Crenshaw, an offensive lineman, has been cut by the New York Jets. Earlier Crenshaw had been let go by the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Gery Palmer, a fourth-round draft pick by the Baltimore Colts from the University of Kansas, was acquired by the Kansas City Chiefs on waivers.

Defensive back Charlie Greer, who went to the Atlanta Falcons in an April trade with Denver, announced his retirement.

The New Orleans Saints trimmed veteran wide receiver Al Barnes of New Mexico State and rookie defensive back Randy Rhyno of Georgia Tech to get the roster to 60.

BASEBALL

Chicago White Sox third baseman Bill Melton waived his appeal for a hearing on a fine and suspension for an umpire-bumping incident and started a three-day suspension.

First baseman Carl Yastrzemski, who missed the entire Oakland series with a shoulder injury, will rejoin the Boston Red Sox in Los Angeles.

The Pittsburgh Pirates said first baseman Willie Stargell will be sidelined for a week to 10 days with a rib fracture.

Minnesota Twins pitcher Ray Corbin underwent surgery on his right elbow and has been lost for the season.

OTHER SPORTS

President Ford has asked the International Olympic Committee to reinstate the amateur standing of reknown Indian athlete Jim Thorpe. This would pave the way to restoring the two gold medals he won in the 1912 Olympics but were taken from him on grounds of professionalism.

Owner John L. Greer said that a deal has been firm up in syndication Kentucky Derby winner Foolish Pleasure at $4.5 million for stud after his four-year-olds season.

Luther "Ticky" Burden, who recently signed a contract with the Virginia Squires of the ABA, was injured in a car accident. He was treated for cuts and bruises and checked for broken bones.

Football News Rates NU 9th

Editor Roger Stanton of the Football News, has tabbed Nebraska to finish ninth in the nation and second in the Big Eight Conference for the 1975 season.

Stanton, who rates Oklahoma No. 1, said, "Nebraska, another team that is always up there, is rated ninth. The Cornhuskers were also rated ninth in the final poll of last season. If they can beat Oklahoma at Norman, Nov. 22nd., then they could finish much higher."

Colorado is the only other Big Eight team to draw top twenty mention, with the Buffaloes tied for 17th with Arkansas. Oklahoma State and Missouri receive honorable mention.

Trailing Oklahoma in Stanton's top ten respectively are Michigan, Alabama, Ohio State, USC, Auburn, Texas A&M, Notre Dame with Nebraska ninth and Texas tenth.

Harry DeVold, a member of the Football News staff, rates the Cornhuskers 10th with a power-rating of 100.76 points. Oklahoma is also DeVold's top selection with 111.0 points.

Six Cornhusker players were mentioned by DeVold for possible all-American honors.

Center Rik Bonness leads the group, but DeVold warns, "he (Bonness) will be pushed, especially by the high caliber material throughout the Big Eight Conference."

Other Nebraska players receiving mention were: Tony Davis, Bob Martin, Ron Pruitt, Mike Fultz and John Lee.

Yeager Lifts Dodgers

By United Press International
Steve Yeager belted a three-run homer in the 10th inning Tuesday night to give the Los Angeles Dodgers a 7-6 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mike Marshall, 8-11, pitched the last two innings to earn the win although he allowed two runs in the 10th. Reliever Gene Garber, 9-7 who blanked the Dodgers from the sixth inning, took the loss after yielding Jim Wynn's third hit to open the 10th. Wynn moved up on a sacrifice bunt and after Ron Cey was walked intentionally, Yeager hit his seventh homer.

In other NL action, Atlanta edged Pittsburgh 3-2, San Francisco downed Montreal 5-2, New York defeated San Diego 9-4, Cincinnati outslugged Chicago 12-8 and St. Louis shaded Houston 5-4.

Rookie shortstop Rob Belloir slashed a two-run double in the seventh inning to lift the Braves over the Pirates. Carl Morton upped his record to 15-12 while Bruce Kison dropped to 9-9.

Bobby Murcer doubled home two runs in the top of the 11th inning to break a 2-2 tie and lead the Giants over the Expos.

Wayne Garrett had four hits and Rusty Staub added three to pace a 13-hit attack for the Mets in a victory over the Padres that gave Tom Seaver his 16th victory. Seaver is now 17-1 lifetime over San Diego.

Moyer Qualifies For U.S. Amateur

Charles Moyer of Wood River shot a par four on the first hole of sudden death Tuesday to qualify for the U.S. Amateur Golf Championships.

Moyer and Ingolf Maustead of Beatrice finished the 36 holes with 148's before the sudden death playoff.

Moyer shot a 72-76—148 on the par 72, 6,600-yard Lincoln County Club course.

Moyer, who's son Craig is a golfer for the University of Nebraska, has an eight handicap.

Only six of the nine entrants played the qualifying rounds Tuesday. Thomas Olson of Omaha withdrew and Craig Waugh of Atlantic, Ia., broke his hand before the competition.

Maustead is the first alternate for the tourney. Robert Howe of Omaha shot a 150 for the two rounds.

In the Kansas City area qualifying rounds, Frank Rose, formerly of Fairbury and a University of Nebraska golfer, was the last qualifier when he got a par on the first hole of a playoff with Jerry Clark of Leawood, Kan. Rose had a 151 for the 36 holes.

NFL Cuts Include Rookies, Veterans

The axe fell Tuesday on many young men hoping to make it in the National Football League. It also fell on some guys who had made it—such as linebacker Ralph Baker of the New York Jets.

Baker, an 11-year NFL veteran, was cut by the Jets and then announced his retirement. The action came as most NFL clubs trimmed their rosters to 60 players, except for those who played for the College All-Stars against the Pittsburgh Steelers Aug. 1. A few already had reached that figure.

The cut deadline was 4 p.m. local time. By the time the season opens, clubs will have cut their rosters to 43 men.

The Jets also figured in a trade Tuesday, giving a future draft choice to the defending champion Steelers for veteran running back Steve Davis, a four-year veteran who gained 246 yards on 71 rushes and caught 11 passes for 152 yards last year.

There were two other trades—the Washington Redskins sent tight end Mike Hancock to the Buffalo Bills for an undisclosed draft choice, and the Denver Broncos sent defensive tackle Greg Marx to the New York Giants for linebacker Henry Reed.

Two veterans also were cut by the Chicago Bears. They were offensive tackle Randy Jackson, who was with Chicago eight years, and defensive tackle Don Hultz, a Bear for 13 years.

Lincolmites Win Water Polo Title

Omaha — The Lincoln Water Polo Club won the Nebraska championship with a 15-5 win over the Rockbrook polo team.

Jim Weyhrauch paced the Lincolmites with five goals. Larry Lamphere and Mark Rinne each scored three times.

The Lincoln club is now 5-0.

Mark Gordon's Graded Entries For Lincoln

Graded entries by the Lincoln Star handicapper are listed in order of expected finish with odds indicating handicapper's opinion of relative strengths of horse.

Greer gained 12 points on Anderson with a win, two seconds and one third in eight mounts while Anderson was not in the money with six mounts.

Greer now trails just 173-172 after being 26 points down before Monday's program. Greer triumphed aboard O. M. Parrish's See My Heels ($15.40) in the fifth and was second on Emil Anderson's Distasteful in the sixth and on Wm Conway and Dorothy Popa's Executive Privilege in the seventh and was third on Garnett Phifer's D.D. Scope in the ninth.

In Tuesday's first race, Randall Meier guided William Vannoy's Dofer Doc to a win over the new distance of about 4 1/2 furlongs. Consequently, Dofer Doc's .51 3/5 time was a track record on the revamped Lincoln surface.

Despite Tuesday's near 100-degree temperatures, the attendance and mutuel handle were above last year's corresponding figures. The crowd of 5,123 was 344 higher than last year's 4,829. The mutuel handle of $301,886 was $41,296 better than 1974's $260,590.

OU Announces

New Cage Coach

Norman, Okla. (AP) — The University of Oklahoma announced Tuesday the hiring of Kathie Schweitzer as head women's basketball coach.

Miss Schweitzer also will coach women's track and field and possibly field hockey, Amy Dahl, women's athletic director, said.

Miss Schweitzer was head track coach and assistant basketball coach for women last year at Bowling Green State University in Bowling Green, Ohio.

Knothole Seats For Pro Game

There will be a Knothole Section at Nebraska's Memorial Stadium for Saturday's pro NFL game between the Baltimore Colts and the Atlanta Falcons, NU Athletic Director Bob Devaney announced Tuesday.

"While ticket sales are good and continue to pick up, we will not have a sold out stadium for the pro game," Devaney said. "So in keeping with tradition, we will make the game available to the young people like we used to do for our games when they were not sellouts."

Knothole Section tickets will cost $2 and will be available to high school and under students, NU Ticket Director Jim Pittenger said.

"We will turn the North Stadium into the Knothole Section," Pittenger said.

The Knothole tickets will be available at the Stadium Ticket Office, starting at 9:00 a.m. Wednesday and will be sold all week at the Ticket Office. They'll also be on sale Saturday at the northeast corner of the stadium from 10:00 a.m. until game time.

Pittenger said ticket sales for the game have passed the 26,000 mark.

Texas' Royal Blasts Sooners' Switzer

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — University of Texas football coach Darrell Royal criticized Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer in a newspaper column Tuesday, for "highly unethical" comments and challenged Switzer to a lie detector test on recruiting practices.

Royal also said much more cheating goes on in college recruiting than "most right-thinking people" know about.

"If it sounds like I am hot, I am — real hot," Royal said in a Tulsa World sports column written by Bill Connors. Texas and Oklahoma are traditional rivals on the football field.

Royal's attacks came in response an earlier Connors column in which Switzer attacked coaching cutbacks under consideration by the NCAA. The regulations being considered would abolish the recruiting coordinator, limit staffs to seven assistants and shorten the time coaches may use to contact prospective players. "What has happened is that some coaches don't want to coach anymore," Switzer was quoted last Wednesday. "They would rather sit home and listen to guitar pickers. They want to make it where you can't outwork anybody. They are fixing to put us out of business."

Royal, for one, is an ardent country music fan and is occasionally seen in the company of Austin's many musicians.

"For Barry to indicate I am in favor of cutbacks because I do not want to work and would rather listen to guitar pickers instead is highly unethical," Royal said. "Since he has felt free to inaccurately express my reasons for favoring cutbacks, I have a proposal to make — again."

"Have the two coaching staffs at Oklahoma and Texas take a lie detector test, based on the recruiting programs of the last two years. If both pass, I will concede I have been outworked and will quit listening to guitar pickers." Switzer later answered the comments from his office in Norman, Okla., saying his staff had undergone polygraph tests April 29 and the results had already been presented to university officials.

The coaches were asked if they offered "cars, clothes, money, paid transportation or the selling of tickets" to any football recruit, Switzer said.

"All coaches answered 'no' to these questions and it was the opinion of the two professional certified polygraph examiners that there was no deception and that all coaches had answered truthfully," Switzer said.

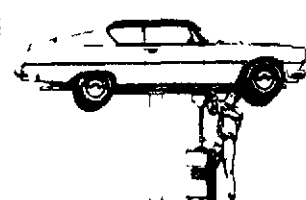

"If I offended Coach Royal I apologize," he said.

Royal's displeasure appeared to involve his plans to support the cutbacks at an upcoming NCAA meeting in Chicago and the recruiting of Billy Sims, a standout runner from Hooks, Tex. who agreed several months ago to play for Oklahoma

Kelley Hopes To Force North Into 'Our Game'

Kearney — Workouts continued Tuesday on the Kearney State College campus for the South All-Star Basketball squad, with the emphasis on polishing the offensive game plan.

"We hope to make the North play our kind of game," said South head coach Don Kelley of Lincoln Plus X. "We're improving and I hope it will continue through the week."

Assistant coach John Johnette of Omaha Burke agreed with Kelley's assessment of the week, adding, "I hope they peak out Friday night."

The injuries which have slowed South workouts Monday were almost totally worked out by Tuesday. Russ Andersen of Wilber-Clatonia continued work on his bruised right knee. Another bruised knee, this one belonging to McCook's John Kugler, healed faster than had originally been thought possible, and the 6-6 standout was back at work Tuesday afternoon. Bill Anderson of Shickley, who received a gash above his left eye, was back at full playing speed after reporting some headaches Monday night.

Tuesday night, another full scrimmage was held against Kearney State alumni, giving the South stars a chance to see if their work was paying off.

Monday night, Kelley singled out Vic Streufert of Seward and Hughes Wilcox of Omaha West-side as having had good practices. Omaha Burke's Rob

Tabitha Open Tourney Set

Men and women 50 years and older may now sign up for the first Tabitha Open golf tournament. Entries are due by Sept. 7.

Men and Women division players will tee-off at 9 a.m., Friday, Sept. 12 at Lincoln's Pioneer Golf Course. The day's activity includes lunch and 18 holes of golf with trophies and prizes awarded winners in various classifications. Lincoln golfer Dorothy Schwartzkopf is volunteer chairman for the tourney.

Tournament entry forms are available throughout the state at local golf clubs or persons may enter by sending name, address, phone and five dollar entry fee to Tabitha Open, 4720 Randolph St., Lincoln, NE. 68510.

North Polishing 'Fundamentals'

Wayne — Head North coach Jim Morrison of Howells ran his North charges through two Tuesday practice sessions on the Wayne State College campus.

Morrison used the morning drills to polish up the North offense and defense. Half-court intrasquad scrimmages filled the afternoon's sessions.

"We're to the point where we have to start correcting the little things," Morrison said.

"Our offense is pretty well established. It's now a matter of proper execution. We're starting to move the ball a little better in free-lance situations."

Hughett Shoots Final Round 80

Colorado Springs, Colo. — Mike Hughett rounded out the seventh annual Insurance Youths Golf Classic Tuesday with a 30-41-80 at the Air Force Academy course.

Hughett had a 157 total for the tournament. He was paired with touring pro Don Bies, who shot a 75-79-154 for the tourney.

Bob Clampett of Carmel, Calif., won the junior division with a 73-71-144, while Greer Jones won the pro division with a 70-68-139.

Stroh, Rodgers Earn Trophies

Creighton Prep's Mark Stroh (North) and Kearney's Brad Rodgers (South) have been named winners of the Bob Russell Memorial Trophies for the 17th annual Shrine Bowl.

The "outstanding training camp awards" are decided, according to a vote of teammates and will be presented at halftime of the 1976 game.

Ord's Bill Gogan and Omaha Central's Gordon Sims Jr. also drew support from the North camp and Omaha South's Oudious Lee and Lincoln East's Bill Holmes were mentioned from the South.

Holmes shared the game's outstanding defensive player Clayton Andrews Trophy with the North's John Havekost of Scribner. Gogan received the Blue Howell Trophy as the outstanding offensive player.

N.Y. Money Troubles Can Affect Everybody

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — For most Americans, the tumult over New

seems very far away. All the lurid events of recent weeks —

the anguished budget meeting and public service strikes — are seen as nothing more than Sin

City's just desserts. Should it fall shrieking into the pit, few

the Hudson River.

But that's just kidding yourself. Like it or not, the financing of New York City is inextricably tied up with the money structure of the entire nation. Big Apple bonds and notes represent more than 25% of all city and state debt outstanding.

Should there be a bankruptcy — or, more delicately said, a reorganization of the debt structure — the shock will be felt throughout the land.

Here are some of the ways the crisis now engulfing New York

City might unexpectedly affect you:

1 — It is already making it harder for other cities to raise money. To attract investors, they have to pay higher interest rates, which means that eventually residents will have to pay higher taxes. Alternatively, your city services might have to be cut, reducing the level of amenities and throwing people out of work.

Older cities with budget troubles of their own are feeling the pinch most — places like

Detroit, Philadelphia,

Cleveland, Buffalo and Seattle.

Even top-rated cities have had to raise the ante to attract investors. "None of California's bonds are in trouble," says

Merrill Ring, head of investment research for the Bank of America in San Francisco. "But Jane Bryant Quinn

we're all part of the general money market. When a big issuer like New York has problems, it forces up the rates for all of us."

The only bright side Ring sees is that other cities, appalled by the New York example, might take more care with their financial management. "If the lessons of New York aren't learned," he adds, "some of California's cities like San Francisco, San Jose, San Diego and Los Angeles could go

1980s."

2 — Any sort of default will have an immediate effect on bondholders, including those who may not realize they are bondholders — such as investors in a mutual fund, or owners of a trust fund. The city might delay interest payments, or — more likely — keep up payments but decline to deliver principal when your bond or note matures.

However, you wouldn't suffer

a real wipeout, says David Breen, research analyst for Weeden &

Co. Over a period of time, New York probably would repay

perhaps the first analyst to say publicly that New York was up against the wall, believes that

extremis.)

3 — The city's present embarassment has sent the municipal bond market to

a quick trade.

profit fast by buying and selling is going to lose," says

Tom Ambrosio, partner in charge of municipals for Loeb

Rhodes. The spread between buy and sell prices is sometimes so large that the market would have to move up sharply just for you to break even.

4 — Default would hurt the stock market. Analysts think investors might dump banks and insurance companies that hold

New York City debt. There also might be a question about the earnings of big corporations that supply New York goods and services. And higher interest rates would suck money out of stocks,

even further.

On the other hand, if the worst in New York finally does happen, the markets might breathe a sigh of relief and turn upward. An old stock market adage has it, "sell on the rumor"

of threatening events, "but buy

All these ramifications, and others not yet dreamed of,

would fall on Americans uneven-

ly. Investors run the biggest risks

(but they also stand the biggest

today's top-yielding tax exempts). Older cities will be hurt more by high interest rates than younger and growing cities.

But a disaster in New York is

about. One way or another, it will affect the warp and woof of the nation's financial structure for a long time to come.

(c) 1975, The Washington Post Company

NEW YORK (AP) — The

stock market gained moderately

Tuesday on the strength of some early buying inspired by the government's request for a moratorium on grain sales to the Soviet Union.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, up about 10 points at its mid-session peak, hung on to post a 4.78 advance at 828.54.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose .57 to 87.12, and the

New York Stock Exchange's

composite index added .33 to 46.48.

367 edge on losers among the 1,791 issues traded on the NYSE.

But Big Board volume picked up only slightly, to 14.51 million shares, from 12.35 million on Monday.

The focus of attention early in the session was the request made by Agriculture Secretary

Earl Butz after the market's close Monday that grain sales to the Soviet Union be suspended.

Analysts traced the warm response to that news on Wall Street to rising concern over the

buying on food prices in this

But they noted that the market still seemed to be struggling against inflation worries and uneasiness over the continued rise of interest rates.

A quarter-point increase in the prime lending rate to 7 3/4 per cent continued to work its way through the banking industry during the day, virtually completing its spread only two business days after it was instituted by New York's First National City Bank.

Oil issues were notably strong following the federal appeals court ruling Monday that President Ford did not have the authority to impose the $2-a-barrel tariff now in effect on imported oil.

Exxon picked up 1 1/2 to 87 1/2;

Getty 4 1/4 to 191; Mobil 1/2 to 44 1/2; Atlantic Richfield 3 to 10 3/4; and Standard Oil of California 1/2 to 30 1/4.

In the oil drilling and service group, J. Ray McDermott rose 2 to 48 1/2 on sharply higher quarterly earnings.

Hughes Tool, which said its most recent weekly survey showed a sharp pickup in oil and

point at 96 1/2.

Virginia Electric & Power, the

dipped 1/2 to 12 1/2. A 174,900-share block changed hands at 12 1/4.

To Your Good Health:

Reader Feels Tired, Gains Weight After Thyroid Dosage Cut

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For about a year and a half I was on three thyroid tablets a day, and my doctor told me I would probably have to take them always. I lost weight and felt good. I had lots of energy.

My doctor died, and my new doctor told me after some tests that one tablet a day was enough. Now I have gained my weight back, and I feel tired all the time. I am 55, and I'm all through having my periods.

Could this have anything to do with my weight problem? — Mrs. A.

Your former doctor told you you would probably have to take thyroid medicine always, but did he say how much? This could be the cause of your confusion.

Under your former thyroid program of three tablets a day, you were probably more active. For, as you say, you had "lots of energy." You were literally "burning off" the excess fat. Under the lower dosage, you do not feel so fit, are tired. The chances are, too, that you have reduced your physical activity, so have quite naturally put on weight.

You should report your sluggishness to your doctor. Perhaps some middle ground can be found in the thyroid dosage that will keep your glandular problem under control and at the same time solve the tiredness problem.

Do not interpret what I've said as suggesting the use of thyroid medicine for reducing. The thyroid gland is too delicate a biological mechanism to be tinkered with for such reasons.

Dear Doctor: I have had bladder repair done, but I get bladder infections every winter. I am 52 years old. The doctor gave me hormones, which helped.

But after a year or two of taking the hormones I began to get lumps (non-malignant) in my breast. The doctor said to stop taking them. Now the fear of bladder infection has me upset. Are there any vitamins I can take to replace the hormones? — Mrs. C.D.

Vitamins are entirely different from hormones, so one cannot be substituted for the other.

A thought about your recurring infections, though. You would be better off finding the cause of them so that appropriate antibiotics could be prescribed.

Yes, bladder problems can occur in post-menopausal women, and hormone treatment has been effective.

The bladder is a kind of "holding sac" for urine excreted by the kidneys between urinations. This makes the bladder a sitting duck for many infections carried through the urinary tract. In fact, a bladder infection often indicates infection elsewhere along the tract, in the kidney, etc.

A winter cold or a flu attack can set off a bladder infection. The cause of your bladder infections might be detected by a study of your urine. I would also suggest that you get an influenza shot before the next flu season.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain the difference in symptoms of an urethral stricture and an urethral infection. What methods are used to treat the stricture? — Mrs. J.O.U.

The urethral infection is, as the name implies, an infection within the urinary duct, which extends from the bladder to the urinary outlet. Several organisms can be the cause, but the one that is quite common is the gonococcal germ. Symptoms are a burning sensation when urinating, or a discharge of pus, sometimes blood.

The stricture is a narrowing of the duct, usually the result of scar tissue left by an infection. A pelvic injury can cause a stricture. Usual treatment is dilation of the constricted area with a metal instrument called a "sound." In severe cases, surgery is required to open the duct.

It will not harm her, but I doubt if it has anything to do with her bowel movement. I'd find a more sensible method of amusing her. If she is truly constipated, she should be seen by a doctor, especially at her tender age.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could using a rather vigorous vibrator on a three and a half year old cause back or leg damage? She enjoys it, and it seems to have helped bring on a bowel movement. She is troubled with constipation. — Mrs. E.A.O.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Asthma is a much more serious and much more complicated condition than hay fever, reports the Nebraska Medical Association. Years of asthma can produce a variety of abnormal changes and responses.

The most feared complication of asthma is emphysema, a stretching of the lungs which makes the person shortwinded.

When a patient's bronchial tubes become so sensitive to irritation from strong odors, cold air and even the common cold, asthma often results. Emotional tension may aggravate the condition and make the patient more prone to asthma attacks.

Numerous drugs have been developed for the relief of asthma, but should be carefully administered under the direction of a physician, because each case varies.

The question of changing climate to relieve asthma is often asked. Frequently parents sell their homes and move, without seeking advice on an asthma condition. Asthma in children is rarely helped by a change of climate.

Persons with asthma, hay fever and other allergies should seek the aid of a physician to help determine the best way to relieve symptoms.

Holdrege Business Best In State

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Holdrege — Business is good in this Phelps County community, thank you, even better than good. In fact, it's comparatively the best in all Nebraska.

For the first four months of 1975, the latest compilations available from the NU Bureau of Business Research, the town has been clipping along with sales 18% above the same period last year.

That, according to bureau statistician Vernon Renshaw, is 6% better than North Platte and a cluster of close third-rankers. And practically 15% above the state's showing as a whole.

Holdrege alone has recorded sales each month of the year exceeding those for the comparable month of 1974. The town topped the state for January and has ranked among the first four cities each month since.

All of which adds up, so far as Holdrege merchants are concerned, to a resounding "Wow!"

Best Since War

"Things are better than at any time since the big surge right after World War II," enthused

Ron Maday, executive vice president of a button-busting Chamber of Commerce. "Our trade area is expanding, we're building even more than last year and some good stable industries are holding unemployment to less than 2%. And this summer could well bring our highest agricultural production ever."

Other community leaders agree it has been largely the "unbeatable combination" of solid-based industries and extensive irrigation which have kept the cash registers ringing. But chamber president Emil Ruzicka offers a third consideration which is becoming more of a factor.

"I can count up 19 long-established businesses which have recently passed to younger people either by sale or family inheritance," said Ruzicka, a 35-year-old executive of First Security Bank. "Somehow it all happened at about the same time. All that young blood adds quite a bit of fire to a community."

Even though 1974 saw such significant construction as a new suburban shopping center (occupants Hinky-Dinky and Gibson's so far), current construction is running well ahead of last year. A comparison shows 62 building permits issued for the first six months of 1975, 38 for the same period of last year.

Prasch Complaint Said 'Damaging, Unfounded'

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer
Construction company president M. W. Anderson has charged Lincoln Public Schools Supt. John Prasch with making "a damaging and unfounded public statement" about his firm's work at Ruth Hill, being built at 5230 Tipperary Trail.

In a letter to Prasch, Anderson said the superintendent made no attempt "to fortify yourself with all the facts" before blaming the construction company for unwarranted delays in completing the school.

Prasch made the remarks to the Lincoln Board of Education on Aug. 5, reported in The Star the following day. In response, Anderson sent copies of his letter to board members, architect R. O. Freeman and The Star.

Prasch had told board members that Anderson's moving the Hill completion date 33 days beyond the Jan. 26, 1975, projection was an "unconscionable delay," which was "almost purposeful" resulting from "arguments between the contractor and the architect."

Those statements "are totally and completely untrue and . . . damaging to the reputation of the M. W. Anderson Construction Co. and were uncalled for, particularly from one in your position," Anderson addressed Prasch.

Anderson said no school personnel, the architects' office or news media ever contacted his company before Prasch made the statements, "to determine what our plans were to make up for the unavoidable time lost."

"Our firm has never intimidated or stated that we would not have this school building ready for second-semester occupancy, despite unavoidable delays due to labor strikes, inclement weather and late steel deliveries," Anderson wrote.

Barring further unpredictable delays, he said "our own plans still call for substantial completion" of $1.63 million school by January. He also noted responsibility of "other prime contractors."

"The only 'argument' between the architect and ourselves was an honest difference of opinion as to the judgment exercised in stopping work from proceeding with the concrete work while the weather was suitable, to avoid possible delays this spring, which in fact did happen," he said.

Under contract terms, the company "was entitled" to request an extension of the completion date to Feb. 5, 1976, which Anderson said is justifiable.

Prasch's statement "also attempts to prejudice our ability to undertake future contracts with the school district," Anderson said. He added he expects that the board will examine future bids and award contracts lawfully, and "that our efforts will not be tainted by your unfounded statements."

Prasch had said the only pressure he could apply was to "tell the contractor he isn't going to work for us anymore," if the job was finished late.

Anderson also cited "documented" unavoidable delays owing to material shortages in work on a previous school addition, which Prasch had referred to.

In a reply to Anderson that Prasch presented to the board in a Tuesday night meeting, Prasch said, "I sincerely regret" if the remarks "appeared to be damaging to your firm, because this was not my intent."

Prasch said he didn't make a public statement to the press, as Anderson charged. Prasch apologized "for the bad publicity, but (I) cannot discuss these matters with the board except in open meeting" where reporters are present.

The delay requested would not have accommodated a second semester opening "and I have a responsibility to report that fact to the board," he said.

Prasch reported that the Anderson Co. on Tuesday notified him the revised completion date for Hill School has been set for Dec. 20, 1975.

Flames Destroy St. Paul Barn

St. Paul (UPI) — A fire Monday on the Gerald Bahensky farm southwest of here destroyed a large barn and caused an estimated $18,000 to $20,000 damage. Volunteer firemen from St. Paul and Dannebrog were called to the scene. One of the firefighters from St. Paul was injured slightly when struck after a hose broke on the side of a fire truck.

Higher School Budget Adopted

Kearney (AP) — No one appeared to give testimony as the Kearney Board of Education adopted a budget of more than $3.8 million for the 1975-76 school year. The budget will require a property tax levy of 56.95 mills, an increase of 6.78 mills from this year. The board reduced the cash reserve requirement from what had been recommended by administrators from $400,000 to $300,000. A $400,000 reserve would have required a levy of about 59 mills.

Dismantling Of Old Building Starts

Eustis — Final worship services were held in the United Methodist Church building Sunday. Dismantling of the 85-year-old structure will make way for a new $278,000 church building, with construction scheduled to start about Sept. 1. Honored at the final services were about 30 members who have held continuous membership in the Eustis church for 50 to 75 years.

Broadened Program Revealed

Hastings (UPI) — Central Nebraska Technical Community College announced Tuesday the broadening of its course offerings to include a full range of credit courses during night classes. Dennis Tyson, CNTCC dean of students, said in the past the only evening classes available at CNTCC were non-credit courses offered by the college's community services division. Tyson said the extended instructional services program will begin on the campus Sept. 15.

Smallest Buffalo School Closing

Kearney (AP) — The smallest school in Buffalo County will not operate during the coming year. The board of the two-student Denman School District No. 41 has decided to contract with either the Shelton or Keneas schools for education of its second-grade girl and sixth-grade boy. State law allows three years for a dissolution decision and none has been made as yet by the Denman District.

Grand Island, Union Sign Pact

Grand Island (UPI) — The city and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, local 1536, have agreed to a three-year contract, retroactive to Aug. 1. The agreement includes an 8% across-the-board wage increase, changes in work scheduling for shift workers, revised procedure for using the Court of Industrial Relations to settle industrial disputes, an increase in mileage from 10 to 12 cents per mile, and other benefits.

Curtis Wants Evidence Contribution Was Illegal

By The Associated Press
Spokesmen for Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Nebr., and his 1972 campaign committee said Monday they were ready to return a $5,000 campaign contribution upon receipt of "credible evidence" that it was illegal.

Comments came from Don Shasteen, Curtis' administrative assistant, and Richard Spelts Jr. of Grand Island, chairman of the Citizens for Curtis Committee.

They said an April 25 letter was received from an attorney saying the $5,000 contribution handed the senator by a lobbyist came from an oil refiner's corporate funds and as such was illegal.

When contacted last Saturday by The Sunday Journal and Star, Curtis made no reference to the April 25 letter.

Shasteen and Spelts confirmed Curtis was one of 24 recipients who were asked to refund the money. The request came from C. J. Queenan Jr. of a Pittsburgh law firm, who identified himself as the "counsel to the special committee of the Ashland Oil Co. board of directors investigating political contributions from corporate funds."

you knew the source of the funds."

Spelts said his letter in response May 12 confirmed neither he nor Curtis knew the contribution was illegal, and asked for evidence of the illegality.

He said he has heard nothing further but would have the $5,000 returned "upon receipt of evidence or documentation concerning the contribution."

I wanted them to prove to me that they had it coming just because some lawyer said it's so doesn't make it true," Spelts said.

Shasteen said Curtis was questioned by the FBI about the contribution prior to the time he received the letter.

The next word, Shasteen said, came last Saturday when Curtis received a telegram from Ashland Oil advising him the company had reported the contribution to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The company said most of the contributions were distributed by Carl Arnold, Ashland lobbyist. Shasteen said Curtis had become acquainted with Arnold through conservative groups.

Missouri Reaches Dam Peak—Corps

Omaha (UPI) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Tuesday the Missouri River main stem dams peaked out at a record 72.1 million acre-feet last month after nearly three straight months of unusually heavy inflows.

The Corps said continuing mountain snows and heavy rains over Montana and North Dakota through the early summer months resulted in the greatest May-to-July flood season runoff since records began back in the late 1800s.

At the time of the July 23 peak, the Corps said 2.5 million acre-feet of vacant flood control space was left in the dams.

The Corps said the greatest amount of inflow into the system occurred above Fort Peck and Garrison Dams. The May through July runoff at Fort Peck in Montana was 234% of normal, while the runoff above the downstream reservoir at Garrison in North Dakota was 188% of normal. The Corps said the runoff from this area during the period was about 2.5 million acre feet greater than any previously recorded.

Brig. Gen. Philip T. Boerger, chief of the Corps' Missouri River division, said peak flood flows below each of the dams would have been about three times greater than at the present had the reservoirs not been in operation. River stages, he said, would have been up to 10 feet higher.

Main stem hydroelectric plants, Boerger said, were loaded to the maximum extent practicable last month, with most of the available units operating at capacity around the clock. This resulted in the greatest single month's energy production — 1.47 billion kilowatt hours — since the system was completed.

Boerger said to evacuate this year's stored flood waters before next year's spring flows begin, releases at Fort Randall and Gavins Point will remain near 60,000 cubic feet per second, or slightly higher, until late fall.

Lancaster County HMO 'Feasible'

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer
Approximately one year and $50,000 later, the members of the Lancaster County Health Planning Council (LCHPC) were told Tuesday the establishment of a Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) in Lancaster county is, in a word, "feasible."

The results of an HMO feasibility study, which was undertaken early last year and helped along with a $50,000 grant from the federal government, appear positive in all areas of concern, according to Alex Slabosky.

Slabosky is the executive director of the Community Health Care Association, Inc. (CHCA), a local group interested in the possible establishment of an HMO in the area.

An HMO is essentially an alternative to conventional health care insurance. Enrollees pay a monthly fee, just as they pay an insurance premium.

In return, they are entitled to receive care from medical professionals associated with the HMO.

According to Slabosky, the feasibility study indicates that, during its first three years of operation, an HMO in Lancaster County would have a projected enrollment of 8,057 families being considered as a unit. That would be sufficient to allow CHCA, the administrative and contracting organization, to break even, he continued.

The feasibility study, among other things, determined that:

- There are no legal barriers which would preclude the establishment of an HMO.
- Recruitment of physicians will be "difficult but not impossible." (Difficult primarily because most physicians are not familiar with HMOs and their operation, Slabosky said.)

- There being sufficient hospital beds in the county, the HMO would not have to operate a hospital.
- The primary care center, or clinic, should be housed in leased space for the first three to five years.

Under federal law, an employer who provides an HMO option to his or her employees will pay the same premium he or she would for commercial insurance, Slabosky said. The difference would be paid by the employee.

At the present time, the federal HMO act of 1973 mandates a basic level of benefits which must be provided by a federally-certified HMO, Slabosky said.

However, the mandated level is too high to enable HMOs to compete with commercial insurance companies.

"The HMO package is far more expensive than anything else you have available," he said.

And he added that, the study's determination of feasibility was based on the assumption that the standards for federal certification will be modified by the passage of amendments to the HMO Act currently pending in Congress.

During the next month, a Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) project review task force will examine the HMO feasibility study, as well as a CHCA grant request for $125,000 in federal monies to be used for planning.

A public hearing on the HMO will be held during that time, according to task force chairperson, Sue Scott.

The SeNHPC board will then take the task force's findings into consideration in recommending approval or rejection of the grant request by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The SeNHPC vote on the matter is anticipated at the Sept. 11 board meeting.

Omaha Lottery May Survive Council Kill

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council Tuesday night killed an application by the nonprofit City Betterment Corp. to operate a lottery in Omaha.

However, the chance remains that the lottery may start in a few weeks.

A court decision has prohibited joint operation of "Big Green" by the city and City Betterment.

District Court Judge John Murphy ruled that state law says the city can't operate the lottery without voter approval. So, the judge concluded, the lottery was illegal.

City Atty Herbert Fitle urged the council to comply with the court decision by ending any city association with the lottery.

"The clearest way to indicate we're complying would be to wipe the slate clean," Fitle said.

The permit application, regulating ordinances and the original council decision approving the lottery should be repealed, Fitle said.

The nonprofit corporation wants to proceed on its own and keep all the proceeds, which would be used for "civic betterment."

But some councilmen didn't want to revoke the regulating ordinance which would provide control over the lottery.

If the requirement for a permit were revoked, the lottery could proceed under the state law that allows nonprofit corporations to conduct lotteries for charity or civic betterment.

The council decided to vote next week on whether to keep the regulating ordinance. Repeal of the council's "official blessing" also was postponed to next Tuesday.

Fitle recommended revoking the regulating ordinance Tuesday and possibly passing a new regulating ordinance later.

The question of a lottery permit for City Betterment may come up again. For example, if the council passes a new regulating ordinance as the city attorney suggests, the corporation could apply again.

It would then come back for a vote of the council, which has favored the previous lottery plan on a 4-3 vote.

Education Board Names Johnson Hartley Principal

Lois Johnson was reassigned Tuesday night by the Lincoln Board of Education to be principal of Hartley School.

She'll succeed Stan Hart, whom the board reassigned earlier this year.

Miss Johnson has been principal of Sheridan School since 1970. She has served in the Lincoln Public Schools since 1952, as teacher and later Meadow Lane School assistant principal. From 1966-70, she worked for the Association for Childhood Education International in Washington, D.C.

Plans Approved To Fix Bridges

The state Department of Roads has approved plans to replace three bridges in Lancaster County.

The plans call for new bridges over Beal's Slough, Salt Creek and Stevens Creek, and are open to public inspection at the Department's main office.

McCollister Raps Inaction

Omaha (UPI) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Nebr., has charged that congressional inaction on energy proposals has raised consumer gas prices and "lined the pockets of the oil sheiks to the tune of $1 billion."

McCollister said the congressional delay for 21 months since the Arab embargo has increased U.S. dependence on foreign oil from 33% to 40%. He said gasoline prices have gone up 6¢ a gallon since January and the lack of an energy plan has "cost American workers thousands of jobs."

The Second District Republican blamed the Democratic majority of Congress for blocking President Ford's energy plan and three compromise proposals so far this year while offering "nothing in their place."

The Democratic majority, McCollister said, "will have a hard time convincing the American people that the President is to blame for rising energy prices."

"With all their harping about who is to blame," McCollister said, "the majority has consistently used more jawbone than backbone."

McCollister, who is taking aim at the seat now held by Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Nebr., said the larger proportion of higher-priced imported oil has forced gasoline prices "higher in this country."

"Inaction is a policy decision," McCollister said in remarks prepared for the Omaha Chamber of Commerce's energy committee. "And the inaction of Congress has raised consumer gas prices in this country and lined the pockets of the oil sheiks to the tune of $1 billion."

"This money could have been greater spent in this country developing our own energy sources and creating jobs for American workers."

appear positive in all areas of concern, according to Alex Slabosky.

Slabosky is the executive director of the Community Health Care Association, Inc. (CHCA), a local group interested in the possible establishment of an HMO in the area.

An HMO is essentially an alternative to conventional health care insurance. Enrollees pay a monthly fee, just as they pay an insurance premium.

In return, they are entitled to receive care from medical professionals associated with the HMO.

According to Slabosky, the feasibility study indicates that, during its first three years of operation, an HMO in Lancaster County would have a projected enrollment of 8,057 families being considered as a unit. That would be sufficient to allow CHCA, the administrative and contracting organization, to break even, he continued.

Projected monthly rates would be approximately $80 for a hypothetical family comprised of 3.6 members; and $16 per individual enrollment.

The feasibility study, among other things, determined that:

- There are no legal barriers which would preclude the establishment of an HMO.
- Recruitment of physicians will be "difficult but not im-

Public Hearing To Be Held On Site Of Omaha Prison

A public hearing will be held at 4 p.m. Wednesday to discuss possible locations for the new medium-minimum security prison to be built in Omaha.

Omaha Sen. John Savage, chairman of the committee holding the hearing, said a site near 72nd and Gerard St. has drawn the most complaints.

He said a tract north of Interstate 680 and southwest of Cahoun Road and U.S. 73 has drawn fewest protests.

South Omaha residents have petitioned against a site at 50th and I Sts.

Several Market Stalls Available

Several stalls will be available at the Lincoln Center Farmers Market, because some season permit holders are not showing up, according to Warner Bantz, chairman of the market.

"The last two weeks have seen empty stalls at the market when season permit holders failed to appear," Chairman Bantz said, "and these stalls will be re-sold to those arriving on Saturday mornings."

The Farmers Market begins at 9 a.m. Saturdays, and is located on 12th between N and O Sts.

Teen's Death Not Counted

The State Accident Records Bureau said Tuesday the death of Philip D. Reed, 14, of Valley, Saturday would not count against Nebraska's highway fatality toll.

Reed was involved in a one-car accident near Valley Friday and died Saturday. The bureau said he died of burns, rather than as a direct result of the crash.

Officers said after a car struck a power pole, the wires came down, and Reed stepped on them as he alighted from the car, suffering extensive burns.

Cold Front Produces Contrasts

A slow moving cold front in Nebraska produced contrasting weather across the state Tuesday, ranging from blistering century mark readings in the east to pleasant 70s and 80s in the west.

Preceding the eastward movement of cooler weather over the state was a 30-mile band of showers stretching from the southwest to the northeast and bringing welcome relief to many areas.

Winds gusting near 90 miles per hour were reported at Offutt Air Force Base in southeastern Omaha. Some buildings were damaged in the Capehart area.

High winds, gusting up to 56 m.p.h., also hit Lincoln late Tuesday night and brought a drop in temperatures.

The Lincoln Electric System reported scattered outages in the city.

Heavy rains fell at Hooper and just west of Fremont Tuesday night, the Fremont police reported.

For the first time this summer, the mercury soared to 100 degrees in Lincoln at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, five degrees under the record high for the date set back in 1935.

Omaha's 103 was the state's highest reading Tuesday with Alliance and Scottsbluff sharing the day's low of 59.

By Wednesday the cooler weather should cover the entire state with highs for both Wednesday and Thursday around 80 in the west to the upper 80s in the southeast.

Services Held For H. Haacker At Wyuka Site

Services for Helen Woods Haacker, 81, who died at her summer home in Wisconsin, were held Monday at Wyuka.

Mrs. Haacker was the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Frederick Woods, early settlers in the Lincoln area. Her four brothers were prominent businessmen and developers in the community.

George Woods was a real estate broker and a member of the City Council. Along with brothers Mark and Burt, he laid out many areas of Lincoln.

Frank H. Woods, the fourth brother, founded the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Mrs. Haacker graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1900. In 1901 she married A. L. Haacker, head of the Dairy Division at the university.

She belonged to the Copper Kettle, Delta Gamma, the Country Club, University Club and the Lotos. She was also the longest-standing member of First Plymouth Congregational Church.

Lincolnite, 28, Crushed Fatally Unloading Semi

A 28-year-old Lincoln man was killed Tuesday afternoon when the semi-trailer he was unloading pinned him against a loading dock at the State Distributing Company, 802 S. St., the Lancaster County Attorney's Office reported.

The man was identified as James Howard Sorensen, 28, of 4431 Colfax Circle. An autopsy showed that death resulted from massive skull fractures, police said.

Deputy County Atty. Robert Gibson said Sorensen, a State Distributing Company warehouse employee, was motioning for truck driver Dale L. Gray, 43, of Holland, to back up to the dock when he became pinned.

Police said Sorensen was pronounced dead at the scene.

Officials said Angela Luther, 24, died Tuesday afternoon in an Omaha hospital of injuries she suffered Monday night in a car-motorcycle accident at a Bellevue intersection.

Auditorium Deficit Called

As of July 31, Pershing Municipal Auditorium was $33,000 in the red.

However, according to auditorium board member Dick White, that deficit is "well within acceptable limits."

"Hopefully, our losses won't be over $35,000" for fiscal year 1974-75, which ends Aug. 31, auditorium manager Ivan Hoig told board members at their monthly meeting Tuesday.

Capital improvements in progress at the auditorium are the primary reason behind the deficit, Hoig explained.

At the end of July last year, the auditorium recorded a $49,600 deficit.

During the meeting, board members re-elected the following officers: Stanley Portschke, chairman; White, vice-chairman; Mrs. Marge Fahrbruch, secretary.

Prison Inmate Reported Good After Stabbing

An inmate of the Nebraska Penal Complex who was stabbed a week ago remained in good condition Tuesday at Lincoln General Hospital.

Thomas Turner was hospitalized last week after suffering several stab wounds.

Another inmate, Baron Walker, is being held in isolation at the complex during an investigation by the State Patrol, according to Robert Parratt.

Turner was sentenced to the Penal Complex in August 1972, to serve 10 years for robbery in Douglas County.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

Forecast for Wednesday
Perhaps one of the most puzzling of the zodiac signs is Virgo. Some astrologers describe the native as a critic, a nit-picker, a person who performs special services and knows everything there is to know about health in general and vitamins and diet in particular. But Virgo is Mercury and communication - here is an individual who must be heard, who writes, strives to communicate, will aid relatives and neighbors, has an immense need to be needed, requires affection to a greater extent than might be surmised, is making new starts this year and will be in a better financial situation next year. Do not let Mercury enter Virgo today! Yes, that is exciting. You'll see.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dig deep for information - refuse to accept superficial explanations. Exercise your right to know. One who pulls strings is going to give you a chance for advancement. Do your job with understanding that you receive credit where due. Message will be clarified.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get chance now to review, to apply special touches, to finish and to insert views on the record. Legal matters remain and must be considered. However, momentum is in your favor. One who cares for you will relieve you of burden.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get "new look" at familiar subjects, persons. You can be more independent in thought, action. Leo, Aquarius persons could figure prominently. You will do some tearing down for purpose of rebuilding.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): You are sensitive now to moods of those around you. Accent on ability to create, make constructive changes, get ideas on paper and work with material at hand. Aquarius, Leo persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 21): Lunar cycle is such that you get down to specifics regarding business transactions, property, taxes, insurance policies or lease. Credits, debts are evaluated. Be versatile without scattering your forces.

VIRGO (Aug. 22-Sept. 22): Your ability to communicate is enhanced. Your views, opinions come across in meaningful, direct manner. Know it and express yourself with confidence. Short detour may be on agenda. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figure in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Evaluate - find out what you want as opposed to what you need. Costs, time involved are major considerations. Key is to be analytical. Take nothing for granted. Ask questions based on personal research.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your understanding scope of events - you do something which benefits yourself, basic security and family. Home adjustment, appraisal is in picture. News is received concerning one who means much to you. Travel and assignment are featured.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will be active in connection with club, hospital, charitable institution. Work, behind the scenes. See as is, not as others paint! rosy pictures. Realistic approach brings constructive results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your presence is felt, your policies are put into effect; you regain greater degree of credit due. Older, more experienced ally, makes statements which rebound in your favor. Some of your fondest hopes and wishes can become realities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You receive meaningful compliment, business offer. You now can see beyond immediate problems, needs. You are able to get credit due and to rid yourself of burden never your own in first place.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Highlight style, independence and originality. Get to heart of matters, go directly to source. Your own interpretations now mean more than any secondhand reports, imitations. A legal quandary will be resolved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, dramatic, stubborn and were literally or psychologically separated from parents at relatively early age. Aquarius, Scorpio and Leo persons play important roles in your life. January and October are your most significant months of 1975. You will recover from emotional setback - if single, marriage is on horizon. Married or single, you will be organizing a business of your own. (Learn "The Truth About Astrology... Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
